Germans Admit Major Break Through Lines by Fifth Army; Strength of Enemy's Forces Broken, Alexander Declares

Rome, June 7 (AP).—The Fifth Army smashed north and west of Rome toward Lake Bracchiano and the key Tyrrhenian port of Civitavecchia tonight in a drive so rapid and powerful that the Germans themselves described it officially as a "major break" through their lines.

Fanning out above the city the Allies advanced far along the vital coastal highway No. 1 toward Civitavecchia, the closest port to Rome, 40 miles to the northwest.

This morning's communique placed the Allied armies more than 10 miles above Rome on a wide front, and today's advances apparently were well beyond these lines. Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, commander in chief in Italy, proclaimed that "the strength of the German armies has been broken."

The German high command said the Allies had "succeeded in achieving a major break" north of Rome and had "succeeded in breaking into our positions" west of the capital.

The Allied command described German resistance as "only light." It had dwindled to disorganized activity by delaying infantry units and self-propelled guns.

The advance was along all main highways west and northwest of the city, including the routes numbered 1 and 2 and the Magliana coastal road, the Allied troops covering a distance of 10 miles from Rome as they reached northward to within 5 miles of Lake Bracchiano. The march reached the important peaks of Mount Grossara, Mount Agulro and Mount Forno, commanding the Bracchiano route for 2 miles.

To the west, advanced patrols reached 3 to 5 miles from the sea and nearly a dozen miles north of the mouth of the Tiber.

Asks Patriots' Aid

As the battered German Tenth and Fourteenth armies fell back, Gen. Alexander broadcast to Italian patriots urging them to rise up and do all they can to disrupt the retreat, adding that "the liberation of Italy now is well under way."

Already more than 18,000 prisoners had been taken by the Fifth Army alone and more thousands were captured by the British Eighth Army, which still was meeting strong enemy defenses northeast of Rome as the Germans threw heavy demolitions and mine fields into the path of the advance. The Germans played for time to retreat from the mouth of a net closing in the hills above Rome.

On the front 50 miles east of Rome, New Zealanders slashed forward from Sora and captured Balsorano 7 miles to the north.

It was announced officially today that battle casualties had "been on a considerably lower scale than expected."

Southern France Landing Expected; Fleet Off Genoa

London, June 7 (AP).—A report to the London press through Switzerland said today that a large Allied fleet was cruising off Genoa and that "an Allied landing on the Ligurian coast (Italy) or even on southern France was expected hourly."

German Planes Strike Weak Blow at England

London, Thursday, June 8 (AP).—The German air force struck a weak blow at England early today, the first since D-Day. Some bombs were dropped in an area near an east coast town.

Mississippians May Spurn Party Choice

Jackson, Miss., June 7 (U.P.)—Mississippi Democrats tonight freed their presidential electors from the traditional obligation to support the national party's nominee for President, warning that unless the Chicago convention bows to their views, Mississippi Democratic electoral votes will be cast for an outside candidate.

An anti-New Deal majority voted to send the State's delegates to Chicago uninstructed as to their choice for presidential nominee but pledged to demand a series of concessions to Southern party sentiment.

Thus Mississippi was aligned with a growing Southern dissent against alleged Administration trend deemed inimical to Southern tradition. Texas Democrats recently took similar action, and the party in South Carolina held a comparable threat over national Democratic leaders in their call for a second State convention after the party course is set at Chicago.

Mississippi delegates were instructed to fight at Chicago for these concessions:

1. Elimination of any proposed plank on racial or social equality.

2. Elimination of any proposed plank backing Federal control of voters' qualifications, including the poll tax.

3. Inclusion of a States' rights plank.

4. Restoration of the two-thirds rule in national convention procedure.

A final resolution gave the State's electors the right to choose some other Democrat if delegates fail to attain their national convention goals.

[Anti-New Deal Democrats in Mississippi were quoted by International News Service as saying they believed similar action would be taken by the party in Virginia, Arkansas, Louisiana and perhaps other Southern States.

[They estimated that between 70 and 100 presidential electors or

DRIVE ENEMY FROM BEACHEADS—Attacking American troops move out of landing craft into the surf and onto the beach on the northern coast of France. Long lines of men who preceded them push over the hills ahead. Half-tracks and jeeps indicate the strength in which the forces landed. Reports from the Supreme Allied Advanced Command Post said the Germans were cleared from all of the landing beaches and that some of the beachheads had been linked up

Russia Ready To Unleash New Offensive

Eight-Day Battle At Iasi Ends With 10,000 Germans Dead

London, June 7 (AP).—The German drive in Romania north of Iasi appeared to have ended today, and the Soviet army newspaper Red Star said Russia now was ready to launch her own promised offensive against the Germans.

The abortive German attacks in the Province of Moldavia cost the Nazis more than 10,000 dead and tremendous losses in equipment during the savage fighting from May 30 to June 6, Moscow announced. The Germans claimed at least 10 Soviet rifle divisions had been "wiped out or decisively mauled."

Berlin said the battle north of Iasi ended yesterday. This coincided with tonight's Russian communique, which said action today involved only small forces.

The Russians also announced another mass bombing attack had been made last night on Iasi itself, smashing military trains and other objectives at the rail junction.

In its recapitulation of the damage inflicted on the Nazis during the week-long battle, Moscow said 315 tanks were knocked out, and 451 planes shot down.

With the German attacks smothered, there was a growing belief that the Russians' long-awaited plunge might begin at any time.

Yelling Troops Took Beaches Over Bodies of First to Fall

Eyewitness Tells Of Nazi Mine Toll Along French Shore

By Tom Treanor

A Command Post of the Liberation Forces, June 7 (U.P.).—I have just returned from France after hitch-hiking on eight ships, mostly Coast Guard.

Coast Guard craft seem to be all over the Channel, snaking survivors out of the water, rushing wounded to first aid and landing Infantry and vehicles on the beach.

I hit the beach myself early during D-Day when the Coast Guard cutter on which I was stationed went close ashore to pull aboard the men who had capsized in a duck.

They came aboard shivering and shaking with cold and, as soon as they got below, proceeded to get seasick all over the place. I ceased interviewing them at this point.

Steps Ashore on France

I transferred to a landing craft and it started sliding and slowing in on some light breakers and gravel. I stepped ashore on France.

All up and down the broad beaches as far as I could see, men, jeeps, bulldozers and other equipment moved about like ants. A few dead lay about, and some wounded were here and there on stretchers awaiting transfer to ships. A few columns of black greasy smoke marked equipment which had been hit by shell-fire.

German shelling was going on steadily at various points up and down the beach. It would work over an area and then move on to another. It was accurate, landing for the most part close to the water's edge. I saw one small landing craft catch fire after taking a hit. Men came spilling out of it into water waist deep. From time to time there were huge concussions as the Engineers set off demolitions.

Column Mounts Cliff

I climbed a rock embankment. A long column of men was winding up the palisade on a narrow path. To reach the palisade I joined a column wading across a slew. The reeds on the far bank were loaded with mines. One man lay at the top of the bank dead. There were more dead men along the path.

Suddenly a voice called to me to "watch yourself fellow, that's a mine." The soldier who called was sprawled on the bank with one foot half blown off. He had stepped on a mine a short time earlier. Now he waited for litter bearers.

I can stand the dead, but the wounded horrify me. I only looked at him to thank him. A few feet farther on I came to a soldier lying in the path curled around a mine. He said his name

Men Drowned, Boats Smashed In Landings

'Salerno' Narrowly Averted as Troops Meet Murderous Fire

By John A. Moroso 3rd

Aboard the U. S. Assault Transport Thomas Jefferson, June 6 (Delayed).—The landing of our spearhead troops on beaches in one sector of northern France today was almost turned into another bloody Salerno by weather conditions which made proper softening up by bombers and warships an impossibility.

The roughness of the water capsized landing craft, swimming "ducks" (amphibious vehicles) broke up and drowned soldiers and sailors, who were seeking to reach shore through the heavily mined area, which also was studded with underwater obstacles.

The Germans fought fiercely and capably, often driving our boats back to sea when they approached. Many tanks were shot up along with the landing craft. Beaches were strewn with the wrecked equipment.

From 6-foot-thick concrete pillboxes disguised as rocks and from batteries hidden in cliffs the Nazis fired antitank guns, 90, 88 and 50-millimeter weapons, 155-mm rifles and 155-mm howitzers as well as scores of machine guns from emplacements in French homes.

Our assault battalion took a hard pounding from the enemy fire and

'We're the Boys Who Can Do It,' Shout Advancing Yanks

London, June 7 (U.P.).—Some of the first American assault troops storming the French beaches went down under a withering German cross-fire, an eyewitness said today, but more and more men poured out of the landing craft, yelling "we're the boys who can do it." Then they swarmed ashore over the bodies of their dead until they established a foothold.

"It was hotter than hell over there," reported Bert Brandt, 28, Acme news photographer, who spent half an hour on the beach on D-Day.

"I was at Anzio," he said, "but Anzio was nothing like this."

The Germans put down an intense pattern of fire on the beaches with 88's, and raked the Yanks from machine gun emplacements, he said. American casualties were spotty, heavy on some beaches, light on others, Brandt said.

Some of First Troops Wiped Out

At one point, Nazi machine guns wiped out some of the first troops as soon as the doors of their landing craft swung open, he said. Because of the opposition met by demolition parties which went in first, later boats with heavy equipment were delayed in getting ashore. But by the time Brandt left the beachhead at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the Americans had got a grip and were starting to advance.

The photographer expressed belief that the Germans were ready and waiting, noting that the enemy opened fire as soon as the first boats ground ashore. He said the Nazis seemed to pour their heaviest fire on one beach for a while, then shift it to the next.

Brandt said the assault boats went in at high tide thereby avoiding the huge iron obstacles off shore, some of which were mined. When the tide went out some of the boats were stranded atop the barriers. He said a "fair" number of mines blew up, both in the water and on the beaches.

An "Unbelievable Sight"

"The whole thing was an unbelievable sight," he continued.

"Planes criss-crossed overhead constantly. You never could look up with seeing a formation of our planes somewhere. P-38's and P-40's zoomed right over our heads, all the time blasting the German defenses.

"Some boats were burning, and a pall of smoke hung over the beach. Some of the boats were swamped by the choppy seas. Bodies floated in the water.

"There were tremendous rafts floating off-shore, jammed with trucks, tanks, and ambulances.

"On one beach we landed tanks. Then some waves of infantry went

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force (Thursday), June 8 (A.P.).—Spurred by a visit of their supreme commander, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who cruised for hours off the beachheads, the Allies today captured their first French town, the Nazi fortified town of Bayeux, population 7000, five miles inshore in the center of the landing area, and cut the highway from Bayeux to Caen as they moved inland in generally heavy fighting against counterattacking German reserves.

Caen, 18 miles southeast of Bayeux and 9 miles from the sea, was the scene of a German armored counterattack which has been hurled back, headquarters disclosed, and the Allied forces were said to be doing "generally better than expected."

Aside from these two towns, supreme headquarters gave no place-names, ignoring a continuing stream of German broadcasts which reported new Allied attacks all the way from the Pas de Calais area on Dover Strait to Nantes at the base of the big Brittany Peninsula jutting out into the Atlanic.

A headquarters communique said the Allied landing beaches had been cleared of the enemy and had been linked up by flank extensions in some cases during the second day of the invasion while steady reinforcements poured in by sea and air.

General Tours Beach Areas

General Eisenhower toured the beach areas in a British vessel for 4½ hours Wednesday, conferring with Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery and other operational chieftains less than 5 miles from German-held territory.

The German accounts, many apparently designed purely to provoke replies, claimed the British Sixth Parachute Division had been "annihilated;" that a beachhead on the right bank of the Orne River had been wiped out; that a new amphibious attack had been made on the Calais area nearest Britain, the heaviest bombed spot prior to the landing.

The Nazi also said new Allied airborne operations were directed against Lorient, Nantes and St. Brieuc—all on the Brittany Peninsula, and on Falaise and Argentan, 30 miles south of Caen and 40 miles inland.

The Germans spoke at length of the "surprising" strength of airborne operations, and Allied headquarters confirmed that these were continued Wednesday on a large scale, without mentioning localities.

Caen Aflame, Germans Say

The Germans said Caen was aflame, and Allied accounts inferentially confirmed this by describing heavy air attacks in that area and shelling of it by the 16-inch guns of the British battleship Nelson.

Heaviest fighting apparently centered afound Caen and Bayeux, the latter a cathedral town.

Reports from the front mentioned many casualties, although there was no solid evidence of the the actual number or proportion. Both the United States and British navies reported their casualties in personnel and ships were so far very small.

Resistance of the German navy and air force continued relatively light. With E-boats driven off in two attacks and 51 German planes downed Wednesday, bringing the two-day total to 104, the Allies lost 23 planes. Lightning fighter-bombers demolished a German

Latest Allied Liberation Communique

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 (AP).—The latest Allied communique reads:

"Allied troops have cleared all beaches of the enemy and have in some cases established links with flanking beachheads.

"Inland fighting generally is heavy.

"An armored counterattack in the Caen area on Tuesday evening was repulsed. Enemy resistance is stiffening as his reserves come into action. The landing of troops and sea-borne military supplies continues on all beaches despite the northwesterly wind which has persisted since the assault.

"Shortly before dawn today light coastal forces while sweeping to the eastward, encountered a superior force of enemy craft. Action was immediately joined and damage was inflicted on the enemy before he could make good his escape.

"Enemy coastal batteries which were still in action today have been silenced by Allied naval forces. It is not yet known whether all have been finally reduced.

"Allied aircraft have been directing the fire of the USS Texas (Capt. C. A. Baker, USN) wearing

Soldier Napping In Glider Finds Himself in Battle

London, June 7 (AP).—An Air Force private unwittingly stowed away in a glider and slept his way into history's greatest military operation, Air Force headquarters related today.

He was Charles Schmelze of Pittsburgh, Pa., who climbed into a glider and fell asleep. The glider was last seen landing in a zone of heavy fighting.

Bund Never Sought Overthrow Of Government, Gissibl Says

By James E. Chinn

Peter Gissibl, former fuehrer of the Chicago unit of the German-American Bund, testified yesterday at the mass sedition trial the organization never conspired with the 29 defendants to overthrow American democracy because it had "a better way."

He also revealed that following his expose of the bund before the House un-American (Dies) investigating committee in 1939 he was warned he was to be "liquidated"—put to death—for "telling too much," and to escape his enemies ran away from his Chicago home and opened a tailor shop in Waukegan, Ill., under the name of Joseph Stalzick.

Gissibl, who was born in Germany 44 years ago, admitted he had taken the oath of allegiance to this country with "a certain mental reservation"—a reservation never to "fight" the people of his fatherland in event of war.

These disclosures came during a relentless all-day cross examination of the former bund leader—the Government's first important witness—by a dozen or more of the 26 defense attorneys. Many times his face reddened as the lawyers probed deep into the secrets of his private life.

The bund's "better way" of spreading Nazi propaganda, Gissibl explained, was to "influence American public opinion in favor of the Nazi philosophy." "That is why we wanted men like Pelley and some of the defendants who had a political influence in this country because we thought they would create a favorable atmosphere toward Germany."

Yanks Capture Biak Airfield Within Range of Philippines

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Thursday, June 8 (AP).—The Mokmer airdrome on Biak Island, giving Gen. Douglas MacArthur a base within bombing range of the Philippines, has been stormed and captured, headquarters announced today on the 13th day of the invasion of the Schoutens.

Stalled and bloodily repulsed earlier in a frontal stab from the initial beachhead, established May 27, MacArthur got behind the enemy positions and swept to the airfield from the rear. American losses were slight.

The airfield is within 880 miles of the Philippines to the northwest and is within good fighter range of Palau, western Carolines naval base of the Japanese, guarding the approaches to the Philippines.

Biak, which is in a group of islands in Geelvink Bay, Dutch New Guinea, also has two other airfields desired by the Sixth Army invaders.

Mokmer's captors are pushing toward the Borokoe airdrome, a few hundred yards to the west.

Mokmer fell to Yanks who had made their way slowly over the same line of ridges from which the Japanese earlier had poured down machine-gun and mortar fire. The Japanese apparently had counted on the Yanks resuming their coastal road drive and had massed their strength there.

To pin down persistent Japanese air opposition Allied planes pounded all available enemy fighter bases in the Geelvink Bay perimeter.

American forces on Bougainville in the northern Solomons extended their position Monday southeastward until they hold virtually all of the more than 25-mile length of Empress Augusta Bay. Although the Japanese occupy the bulk of that island, it is dominated by American air bases. The enemy supply line to Rabaul was cut long ago.

Congress Defers Pearl Harbor Trial

Both the Senate and the House yesterday accepted their conferees' compromise extending for six months from yesterday—after the fall elections—the time in which court-martial could be started against persons held negligent in connection with the losses at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941.

Allied Bombs Ring Beachhead Nazis

War Sidelights

Sabotage Maps Flown To French

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 (AP).—French communications workers were supplied by Allied airmen on D-Day with instructions for sabotage, it was disclosed tonight. (Late dispatches show a wave of sabotage spreading throughout France.)

Maps showing rail and other communication lines, the instructions and an "urgent message" from Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, were dropped.

"From now on there cannot be any 'secondary' railroads, roads or waterways," the message said. "From the enemy's point of view, all communications are vitally important."

The instructions added that, in event the Germans attempted to route traffic through so-called "secondary lines, you must see to it that they get into a dead-end street."

First Pilot Crash-Lands

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 (AP).—The Ninth U. S. Air Force announced tonight the first Allied fighter pilot to land on Allied territory in France was Lieut. Norman J. Johnson of Vernal, Utah, a Thunderbolt pilot, who made a crash landing near the coast.

Gigli's Villa Sacked

Rome, June 7 (U.P.).—The villa of the former metropolitan opera tenor Beniamino Gigli, was sacked last night by Italians who were angered at the singer's alleged friendliness with the Germans during the Nazi occupation. Gigli was away from home.

'Mickey Mouse' Password

London, June 7 (U.P.).—Mickey Mouse played a part in the Allied landings in northern France, it was revealed today.

rough surf. Much equipment was left in the landing boats by green troops rushing to dig into the sand.

Using cross-fire, the Nazis time and time again cut off beaches and isolated troops. Naval gunfire support for the beleaguered troops finally saved the day.

The battleship Texas moved close inshore and silenced a 155-mm battery in a cliff while destroyers pounded continually at pillboxes.

With this aid, troops using flame throwers and grenades gradually choked off the defenders and reinforcements are now streaming across the Channel in a shuttle service expected to clear the beachhead.

Some of the beaches to the right and left of our objectives had little or no resistance, so when our boats were unable to land with supplies they were diverted to other beaches.

Terribly, Says Small

Capt. John D. Small of Chevy Chase, Md., here on a special naval mission, went in on the first boat wave and returned to the transport, saying:

"It is rough. Terrible. Awful. Pillboxes were untouched. The Nazis have a lot of fire-power there. Boxes were disguised as rocks. The Germans controlled water mines from shore."

Lieut. (j. g.) Ross E. Schumann, 23, of Chicago, who is participating in his third invasion, said naval 5-inch shells bounced off enemy pillboxes built in the cliff, doing little damage to the heavy concrete facings.

He said Rangers captured their beach quickly, but failed to scale the cliffs and silence the 155-mm. battery atop it.

The Rangers had borrowed hydraulic ladders from the London Fire Department to help scale the cliffs. These ladders had .30 caliber machine guns lashed to the top rungs.

Schumann said the American flame throwers did excellent work against the fortified houses, in some cases turning areas occupied by the enemy into a flaming hell. These houses had enabled the Nazis, however, to kill numbers of soldiers advancing across the beaches.

Tougher Than Sicily

Coxswain James Wimberly, 21, of Spartanburg, S. C., who took the first wave of troops to one of the most hotly contested beaches, said the French landing was tougher than the murderous Sicilian assault.

The water became so rough that boats bringing back the wounded were unable to get them aboard.

At 11:15 a. m., our warships opened a furious bombardment trying to relieve the hard-pressed troops ashore. Some had mired in soft sand and were helpless.

It was a grim picture near the beaches. We couldn't land and many boats spun in aimless circles waiting hopefully for gunfire to clear the beachheads. Rising tides hid underwater obstacles not removed previously.

Lieut. (jg.) John Kolody, 25, of Arnold, Pa., made two trips to the beaches.

"The beach," he said, "was a bloody one even on the first wave. I met one wave commander who said his whole outfit went down. There was heavy machine-gun fire. Army equipment, tanks and Navy boats were on the beach shot up and burning."

Was Stationed Here

Captain Small, a native of Palestine, Tex., was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1915 and served abroad on destroyers during the first World War. Entering aviation in 1922, he was put in command of a squadron.

Resigning from the Navy in 1927, he served as western manager for a commercial alcohol company in Philadelphia. He re-entered the Navy the day after Pearl Harbor and was stationed in the resources branch of the Navy Department here until he was sent overseas last May.

The 49-year-old materials officer is a member of the Army-Navy Town Club and the Columbia Country Club. His wife, Mrs. Gwendolyn Small, lives No. 5 West Blackthorn st., Chevy Chase.

He has three children, Mrs. Preston F. A. Marshall of Detroit, Mich., a former Ensign in the Navy; John Davis Small and Storm Davis Small, who are attending local schools.

Fliers Trying To Seal Routes Into Battle Area

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 (AP).—Allied warplanes, which have flown a total of 31,000 sorties against Europe since June 1, today threw down blazing curtains of bombs and bullets intended to cut off both help and escape for German troops on the perimeters of the expanding beachheads in France.

South of Caen, 250 to 500 Flying Fortresses and Liberators heavily attacked road junctions to block off German reinforcements. In this unusual front-line use of heavy bombers, neither antiaircraft fire nor German fighter opposition was encountered.

Clouds prevented assessment of the damage done.

Allied fighter planes were holding an aerial cordon around the beachheads that spelled a virtual death warrant for enemy aircraft trying to attack, while swarms of other planes of nearly every sort scourged the German reinforcement routes.

Pour in Reinforcements

Flying weather continued bad and enemy resistance slowly increased, but the Allied airmen flew lower than customary to pour explosives and airborne reinforcements down on the Germans.

Fighters in a 50-mile arc strafed and bombed in advance of the Allied ground forces and shot up oil tank cars, trucks, airfields and flak towers.

Bombers struck Rennes, Le Mans and Laval, rail junctions on a main east-west line to the Brest Peninsula, where the Germans said the new landings had been made.

The effects of the tremendous Allied preinvasion attacks on Nazi communications was reflected in the disclosure that on D-Day only one railroad bridge and five highway bridges were undamaged over the Seine between Paris and the sea.

Every railroad bridge and all except two highway bridges between Paris and Rouen had been destroyed. Some bridges still intact were captured by Allied air-borne forces before the Germans could damage them.

Germans Lose 70 Planes

The German air force, absent from the skies through most of D-Day, began to rise slowly to Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering's order to fight or perish, and its losses mounted to at least 70 planes since invasion began.

Allied losses in a like period reached 73 as air units threw caution to the winds and defied weather and ground defenses alike to bomb and strafe enemy columns, armor, convoys of trucks, trains, railyards and airfields.

Half of one armored convoy of 75 to 100 vehicles was reported wiped out by 16 Thunderbolts.

Fighters mounted guard while troop carrier planes, many towing gliders filled with fighting men, dumped more parachute troopers behind the enemy lines last night and early today. Twelve carriers and 122 gliders, capable of carrying 500 men, were missing.

At least 200 fighters were on constant patrol over a 60-mile sector of Normandy, where troops were fighting inland, and a dozen Junkers-88 bombers were routed with the loss of four when they tried to break through in the first attempt to raid the beachhead.

Five Nazi Troop Carriers Smashed

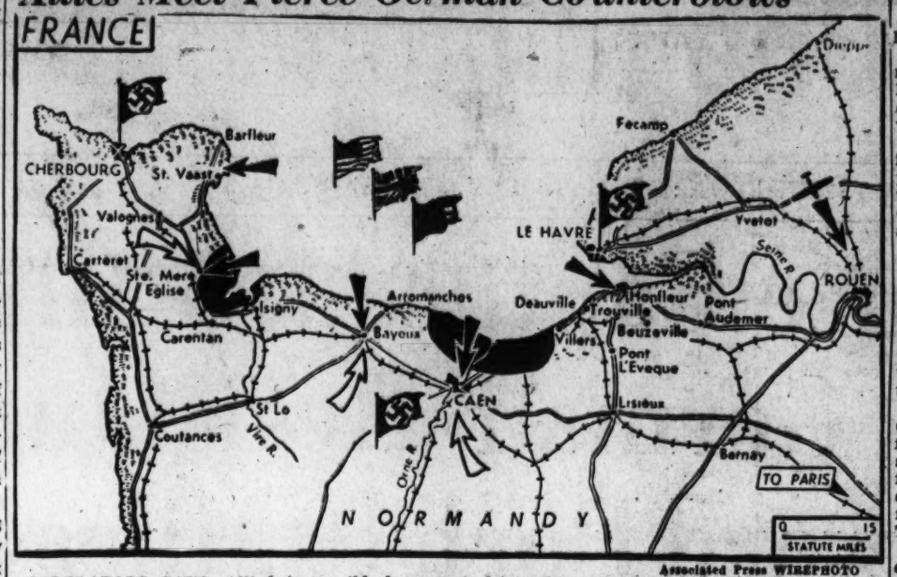
Mosquitos on offensive patrol caught five German troop carriers attempting to move up reinforcements and shot them all down.

In a thunderous climax to D-Day air operations in which the Allies flew an amazing total of over 12,000 sorties, the Royal Air Force sent more than 1000 heavy bombers in two waves drenching targets just behind the landing area with more thon 5600 tons of bombs last night.

They lost 13 bombers as some of them dived to the suicidal level of 2000 feet to get under cloud cover and make sure their bombs fell true. They carried orders to get down below if they found clouds over their objectives.

One formation bombed a train of fuel cars and a pilot said he had just counted 27 of them when they all disappeared in one big explosion.

Allies Meet Fierce German Counterblows



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

LIBERATORS GAIN—Allied forces (black arrows), driving inland from the French coast, repulsed heavy German counter attacks near Caen and cleared all their beachheads, SHAEF reported today. The Nazis admitted "superior forces" had established two beachheads (black areas) at the mouth of the Orne River and north of Carentan. Berlin radio reports indicated German counter-attacks at Ste. Mere Eglise, Bayeux and Caen (white arrows). SHAEF, however, reported the capture of Bayeux. There was no further word on the previously reported Allied airborne landing north of Rouen (plane symbol) was Pvt. Morton Soratello of the Bronx. I asked him if it didn't make him nervous to be curled around a mine like that.

WITNESS

Curled Around a Mine

"No," he said, "I just keep clear of it and pass the word on to those behind. These 'shell craters' you see are all really mines. That's why we're stuck on this path."

Standing there, I looked down on the beach below us. Landing craft of all descriptions were sliding in through the low surf, disgorging men who moved through the water with amazingly little effort. As soon as they got ashore and saw the men moving around calmly they seemed to steady down and walk quietly themselves.

The line ahead of me still wasn't making any headway, so I began to make my way down the path again. But first I stopped to look again at the greatest armada in history stretched out below. It was too much to describe. There were so many transports on the horizon that they looked like a shoreline. Destroyers were almost on the beach.

Going down the path was tough. Once I would have stepped on a mine had not a soldier told me to walk on his back rather than step off the path. Another time the Germans began shelling the path.

As I reached the beach the German artillery came down in earnest.

The first landing craft I boarded hung on a sand bar. We had to unload and carry five stretcher cases through deep water to a second craft. I finally boarded a Coast Guard craft after tranferring three times.

in followed by engineers, and then more infantry."

Troops Hunt Any Cover

Once on the beaches, the troops crouched behind Jeeps and tanks, or any obstacle they could find. At one place, he said he saw troops work their way to a German concrete defense wall, the first cover they found.

"To the right of the beach were tall cliffs which were scaled by Rangers," he said. "They captured gun positions there within 15 minutes after they went in."

Despite the fierce resistance everybody was calm and Brandt was impressed by the expert organization behind the operation.

Hitch-hiking his way back across the Channel to return with the first pictures from the beachhead, Brandt said one of the boats he was on carried wounded. A surprisingly large number were only minor casualties. In one corner of the boat sat a wounded boy sobbing. He told Brandt:

"For three years I've been training for this, and what happens? As soon as I started off the boat I got hit. I didn't even get to fire a shot at a German."

Polish Premier Sees Great Future For Mankind

Polish Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajczyk conferred with President Roosevelt for more than an hour yesterday and told reporters he was convinced the assault on Hitler's Europe would mean not only "liberation, but a great life for mankind."

The Prime Minister said he was satisfied and delighted to see the President in such good health, but he declined to say whether their discussion had gone into Polish problems.

"I am grateful," he told reporters, "for his inviting me at a time when he is so busy with the great events in Europe."

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ITALIAN FRONT—In a whirlwind drive so powerful that the Germans themselves called it officially a "major break" through their lines, the Fifth Army yesterday smashed north and west of liberated Rome toward Civitavecchia (arrow), key Tyrrhenian port. Reports reaching London from Switzerland said a large Allied fleet was cruising off Genoa and that "an Allied landing on the Ligurian coast . . . is expected hourly" ism, with a view to changing the Government within the Constitution."

Gissibl declared he "wouldn't be surprised" if he lost his American citizenship because of the admission that he took his oath of allegiance with "a certain mental reservation." "I don't want to lose, it," he said, "but I'm not afraid."

Coming to this country in 1923, the witness said he became a naturalized citizen in 1929, and continued to pay dues to the Nazi Party in Germany until 1937.

Within a year after arriving in the United States, he admitted, he helped his brother Fritz, now a high ranking official in the Nazi Party in Germany, organize the Teutonic Society which later developed into the German-American Bund. The "real purpose" of this society he declared, was to "further the Nazi cause in this country." And the aim of the bund, he added, was the same "to a certain extent."

One by one, Gissibl disclaimed any acquaintanceship or "contact" with 15 of 16 of the 29 defendants about whom he was asked before court adjourned for the day. The lone exception was Mrs. Lois de Lafayette Washburn (alias TNT), an organizer of the National Liberty Party. He said he met her in Chicago in 1937 when she came to the bund's headquarters there in Haus Vaterland, and asked for an opportunity to speak to the bund members.

The request was granted, the former bund leader declared, and during the speech Mrs. Washburn became "quite violent in her expression against Jews and said Germany had set a good example of how to handle them."

Gissibl said, however, his bund unit, on orders from national headquarters in New York, had collected $200 or $250 for a legal defense fund for Robert E. Edmonston, but he did not know nor had ever seen this defendant before the trial.

U. S. Witness 20 Other Times

Maximilian J. St. George, one of the defense attorneys, in his cross-examination, developed that Gissibl had been a Government witness in 19 denaturalization cases and one sedition case since January, 1943, and had hopped about the country at Government expense from Waukegan to the West as far as San Francisco and to the East as far as Newark, N. J.

Tried to Prevent Outbreak of War, Vatican Declares

Vatican City, June 7 (U.P.).—The Holy See today issued an official declaration asserting that it had exerted "intense diplomatic activity" to prevent the outbreak of this war, and that since armed conflict began it had maintained an attitude of "strict impartiality" and devoted itself to humanitarian work.

The declaration said the Papal government would continue an attitude of neutrality no matter what military authorities controlled Rome, and expressed "every confidence that it will be able to continue its spiritual activity in the world through regular free contacts with its representatives in various nations and with the episcopacy of the Catholic church in every country."

headquarters Wednesday afternoon.

One returning flier said the Germans had flooded three large lowland areas near the beaches in efforts to hold up the Allied advance.

The German land forces put up increasing resistance that was expected to become still stronger as the Nazi command struggled to discern and meet the Allied strategy.

Allied air-borne operations, a feature of the initial landings, were resumed Wednesday on a "very large scale," the Allied communique stated, while supplies and men moved constantly to the beaches despite strong northwest winds, which moderated somewhat tonight.

Clearing the beaches of the enemy freed the supply and reinforcement convoys and men from small arms attack, while naval forces silenced remaining German coastal guns which had escaped the first furious air and sea assault Tuesday.

Headquarters conservatively stated: "It is not yet known whether all have been finally reduced." The U. S. battleship Texas and the British cruiser Glasgow were officially credited in this work with aircraft spotters.

Air headquarters announced operations Wednesday were on as big a scale as Tuesday, which would mean that by Thursday morning the 48-hour total of sorties flown would possibly reach the nearly incredible total of 25,000.

Aircraft of all types participated in guarding the troops and attacking enemy positions, particularly in a 50-mile arc south of Caen, the high spot coming with a bombing raid on Caen road junctions by 250 to 500 American Flying Fortresses and Liberators to block German reinforcements.

The Berlin radio said Field Marshal Erwin Rommel had rushed reserves of the German 7th and 15th armies into the mounting struggle.

The DNB German news agency said an Allied airborne division had been landed on the western coast of the Cherbourg peninsula—on the opposite side of the 30-mile strip of land from where the original sea and airborne landings were carried out. The landings were said to have been between Lessay and Coutance, 30 and 44 miles below Cherbourg.

Another Berlin broadcast said an Allied landing attempt had been beaten off at Le Havre this afternoon.

Picked American combat teams that were pinned down on the beaches by fierce German fire for the first 24 hours of the offensive broke out and drove inland. Unconfirmed reports said penetrations had been made to a depth of 12 miles in some places, but the fighting was confused and no definite lines yet had been established.

The German high command admitted that "superior" forces had established beachheads more than 40 miles apart, at the mouth of the Orne River and north of Carentan on the Cherbourg peninsula. A Berlin news broadcast said the Allies held a bridgehead about 21 miles wide and 6 miles deep at the mouth of the Orne.

Details Withheld

Allied officers were loath to give specific details of the fighting, as they believed the Nazis still were somewhat bewildered by the multiple landings by sea and air. The stiffening enemy resistance was the natural result of Rommel having rushed reinforcements into individual localities where he had been able to size up Allied attacks.

Reflecting the enemy's expectation of Allied landings at new points, a German news broadcast declared that a vast armada of more than 100 Allied warships and countless smaller vessels had been standing off Le Havre since last midnight, probably foreboding a "major bid against Le Havre."

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Nazi military commentator, broadcast that American air-borne troops dropped between Valognes and Carentan yesterday had been reinforced from the air and had fought their way toward the coast and joined with sea-borne forces. Valognes is 10 miles south of Cherbourg, on the Norman Peninsula.

Both sides dropped air-borne troops into the flaming battlefront, with Allied parachutists and glider troops pouring down early today from a 50-mile-long sky train.

American troops fighting through the maze of German defenses were under the command of Lieut. Gen. Omar Bradley, the "doughboys' general," who directed the successful final drive on Bizerte at the climax of the Tunisian campaign.

Early today there was some Allied pessimism, reports having indicated that Allied forces had accomplished less than had been expected of them and that the weather was interfering with the flow of reinforcements and supplies across the Channel. But as the day wore on and additional advices came in from the front, this mood changed to one of "sober satisfaction."

It was announced that Allied air-borne forces had carried out "all the tasks allotted" them. Their part of the operation was considered so markedly successful, in fact, that the Allied command was encouraged in respect to their future use.

There still was no Allied confirmation of a German report that Allied air-borne troops had landed on the channel islands of Jersey and Guernsey, just off the Cherbourg Peninsula.

No additional American naval losses had been reported since the announced loss of two destroyers and a tank landing craft up to noon yesterday. The veteran U. S. battleship Arkansas, as well as the Nevada, was disclosed to have participated in the preinvasion bombardment of German coastal defenses.

The Nazis had warned the French people under penalty of death not to leave their homes from dusk to dawn.

the flag of Rear Admiral Carleton F. Bryant (USN) and HMS Glasgow (Capt. C. P. Clarke, DSO, RN) which, together with other Allied warships, have been engaging inland targets behind the beaches.

Allied aircraft of all types and in great strength have closely supported our land and sea forces.

Early this morning air-borne operations were resumed on a very large scale, supplies and tactical equipment being delivered to our ground forces.

In two operations this morning, medium and light bombers attacked large troop concentrations and military buildings close behind the enemy lines as well as gun positions in the battle area and railway lines south of the battle area.

Road, rail and other targets, including armored vehicles, troop concentrations, gun positions and ammunition dumps were also attacked during the morning by fighter-bombers.

Heavy bombers in medium strength attacked focal points on the road system in the area south of Caen early this afternoon. Fighters escorted the bombers and also strafed and bombed railway yards, locomotives, trains of oil tank cars, flak towers, radio installations and airfields over a 40 to 50 mile arc south and southeast of the battle area.

Continuous patrols were maintained over shipping, the beaches and the battle area. More enemy aircraft were encountered than on Tuesday and a number of them were shot down.

Leaders Confer

Eisenhower Cruises Off Beach Front

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force (Thursday), June 8 (AP).—For 4½ hours yesterday General Eisenhower and Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay, commander of Allied naval forces, cruised off the beaches of northern France and held conferences with operational commanders, it was announced today.

Gen. Sir Edward L. Montgomery, commander of the ground forces, and Rear Admiral Alan Goodrich Kirk, commander of the U. S. naval task force, were among the high officers who attended the conclave in the midst of an armada of thousands of ships.

A meeting was held within 5 miles of the enemy at one point because Eisenhower felt he could thereby get better communications.

Upon his return the general showed satisfaction at the results of the conferences.

As Montgomery, in corduroy trousers and fleece-lined jacket, clambered down from the warship into his launch, Eisenhower grinned, stuck up his thumb and called:

"Good luck to you."

Eisenhower also had an historic conference Sunday night with Prime Minister Churchill, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Prime Minister Jan Christiaan Smuts of South Africa.

The meeting lasted two hours and the supreme commander subsequently reported complete agreement was reached with the French on military matters.

Report Paratroop Blow May Isolate Prize French Port

London, June 7 (AP).—The Germans reported tonight a full Allied air-borne division ferried by 300 planes had dropped to earth on the west side of the Cherbourg Peninsula and conceded the Allies had made gains which threatened to isolate the prize port of Cherbourg.

Nazi broadcasters declared coastal guns had repulsed an Allied landing attempt off Le Havre; that long-range batteries fired upon smoke-screened ships during "a second daylight invasion attempt" at Pas de Calais, but results were not observed.

The Germans said new air-borne landings were made at Coutances and Lessay, across the Cherbourg Peninsula from the main Allied assault positions but only 25 miles from the nearest of these holdings.

"Strong Paratroop Forces"

Altogether, between two and five new Allied divisions have been landed since Tuesday from air and sea and "very strong paratroop forces" and glider formations continue to drop, Berlin said.

The German radio conceded that Allied air-borne troops which were astride the main highway leading from Cherbourg down the peninsula toward Paris had linked up with forces from the coast.

The radio reported Allied tanks had plunged through the Atlantic Wall in a drive southeast upon Bayeux from Arromanches on the coast. Caen was "burning like a blazing torch," these accounts said.

DNB asserted the German air force had swung into action and was directing uninterrupted machine-gun fire at British and American landing units lying offshore between Cherbourg and Le Havre.

Nazis Using Air-Borne Force

In a potential preliminary to a full-scale counterattack, Field Marshal Gen. Karl Rudolf Gerd von Runstedt reportedly was pitting his own air-borne troops against those of the Allies.

The Allies, the Germans said, were waging "highly mobile and aggressive" warfare.

Marshal Erwin Rommel, German field commander, was reported rushing up reserves of the Seventh and Fifteenth armies and battles were declared rapidly increasing to a grand scale.

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, German commentator, said "super heavy tanks are accompanying German tanks which have hitherto not been used in battle. German elite formations . . . are rushing against the enemy."

Big U. S. Loss Claimed

In an apparent attempt to spread dissension among the Allies, one broadcast made the unconfirmed declaration that United States losses after 36 hours of battle "have been estimated at three times those suffered by the British."

The chief German admission of Allied success came from the Berlin radio, which said the Allies had occupied a strip 34 kilometers (21 miles) long to a depth of 10 kilometers (6.21 miles) in "some places."

Another enemy report said Nazi E-boats under orders to "disturb" the Allied invasion fleet sank a 3000-ton craft last night.

Nazis Expect To Stop Allies, Writer Says

By Larry Allen

(Associated Press War Correspondent Just Repatriated Aboard the Gripsholm)

New York, June 7 (AP).—During eight months as a Hitler prisoner of war I have seen Germany from inside and outside her prison camps, have traveled through fortified areas and over her railways from Brenner Pass to the Polish Corridor, and am convinced she still expects to win the war.

She is counting on stopping the Allies in France, foreing a stalemate and an eventual negotiated peace which to every German would mean victory.

What Nazis Tell People

Her warlords tell the German people and those of Nazi-satellite countries that:

1. Germany has at least four million crack troops in the west, backed by powerful fortifications.

2. She has saved a minimum of 5000 fighter aircraft alone to meet the attack, deliberately letting the Allies believe there is a shortage.

3. Her bombed-out war factories are being rebuilt in new locations by captive workers as fast as they are smashed.

4. Communications systems, great, fast electrified railways, are virtually intact except in the Berlin and northern French districts.

Claim 800 Divisions

5. The high command claims 800 divisions—roughly about 8,000,000 men—are ready in both east and west; that Eastern Front losses are small because of ordered, strategic withdrawals.

6. German internal food supply and civilian morale, despite heavy Allied bombings, is surprisingly good.

7. Germany says the Allies are morally weak. She particularly singles out the American as an "I Want to G oHome" soldier.

Sabotage in Germany is virtually nonexistent, because of Himmler's Gestapo and the Wehrmacht police.

German officers smile at Allied reports of thousands of tons of bombs dropped, and at claims that communications to the Eastern Front have been disrupted.

They don't deny the bombings, but say the results are something else.

Nazis Left 1000 Wounded Soldiers In Rome Hospitals

Rome, June 7 (AP).—A thousand wounded German soldiers have been found in the hospitals of Rome, Allied military government officials said today.

More than 25,000 casualties were being treated here just before Allied occupation but the Germans succeeded in evacuating most of them, it was ascertained.

Within 48 hours after the city's occupation, soup kitchens capable of feeding 400,000 persons were opened.

There was not a single case of malaria, 16,000 hospital beds were available, large quantities of coal were obtained for power and some parts of the city had electricity within a few hours.

Suicide Attacks In Channel Feared

New York, June 7 (AP).—Ruthless "suicide attacks" by light German naval elements upon Allied supply lines in the English Channel are forecast in advices received from French beachheads by the British Information Service today.

"These attacks may be carried out by between 100 and 200 U-boats," the service said. "In addition, the Germans can dispose about 100 E-boats for other desperate onslaughts."

Bradley Commander of All U. S. Ground Forces in France

'Doughboys' General' Known to Nazis as Master Tactician

Lieut. Gen. Omar Bradley.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 (AP).—Lanky Omar N. Bradley—the "doughboys' general" who has killed more Germans than any other U. S. general officer—is commanding all U. S. ground forces participating in the attack in France, it was announced today.

The Germans know this simple, kindly lieutenant general as a master tactician who outsmarted them in the climatic battle of North Africa and who ushered them unceremoniously out of the mountains in the epic 38-day conquest of Sicily.

In the initial stages of the landings in France, Bradley operated from the deck of the flagship USS Augusta—birthplace of the Atlantic Charter—off the French coast, but he indicated he would move in with the troops at the earliest possible moment.

He picked to direct this momentous engagement many men he personally trained as officers as head of the Infantry Officers' School at Fort Benning, Ga.

He also has trained more "shave tails" than any other U. S. general officer, for Fort Benning graduated second lieutenants at the rate of 40,000 a year under the methods which he supervised.

From Pershing's State

This 51-year-old Missouri-born commander, the greatest military contribution to the "Show Me" State since "Black Jack" Pershing, contrasts sharply with his imperious, colorful opponent, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, a Nazi veteran of slam-bang advances and long retreats.

Bradley is known as the "doughboys' general" because he is sparing of the lives of his men.

But he is a tough, knotty fighter with the tenacious, sledge-hammer persistence of Gen. U. S. Grant, the shrewdness of a New England horse trader, but with a personal dignity and integrity that can be compared with that of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

A native of Clark, Mo., he was in Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's class of 1915 at West Point and it was Eisenhower who gave him his first chance to show what he could do in the field in North Africa. He responded with the smashing offense that captured Bizerte.

Bradley says of the German: "Cunning and unscrupulous—somebody to be exterminated."

The bespectacled commander stands 6 feet and weighs about 180 pounds. One of the best rifle shots in the Army, he also is known for his athletic record at West Point. A good hitter, he also could throw a ball farther than any man who ever attended the Academy.

Bradley is as homely as a Missouri corn cob pipe, but carries himself with honest, awkward grace.

He was genuinely distressed when he was quoted recently as assuring one division that invasion casualties would be small.

That, he asserted, was impossible to tell in advance of battle because none could foretell the conditions under which the two arimes would lock horns. But he thought it was equally unreasonable to be pessimistic and predict huge losses.

Cool in Battle

Bradley is cool in battle and so personally courageous that he is a source of constant worry to two young captains who act as aides. He always moves his staff up as close as possible to the front lines and in both Tunisia and Sicily his headquarters were bombed and shelled.

"He seems to be happiest," said one officer who wasn't happy about this, "when we are bivouacked in a spot where our artillery is firing over our heads in one direction and enemy shells are whistling past us from another."

He maintains perfect discipline, yet an officer who served under him in two campaigns says he has never known General Bradley to raise his voice to any man.

15 Monkeys in Circus Are Eaten by Lions

Jefferson City, Mo., June 7 (AP).—Officials today said the lions and 15 monkeys of a circus showing here were caged in the same railroad car. Between stations the cages jarred open and at the next stop there was no sign of the monkeys. The lions had eaten them.

Nazis Too Busy Now, OWI Stops Broadcasts

The Office of War Information said yesterday it had discontinued shortwave broadcasts to German troops from New York transmitters "on the theory that the Germans will be too busy to listen to them."

Smith Denies Attempt to Kill Price Control in Probe of OPA

By the Associated Press

Representative Smith (D., Va.) addressed the House on a point of personal privilege yesterday to reply to an article by Marquis Childs, Washington newspaper volumnist, charging Smith with seeking to destroy the Price Control Act.

The Virginian, chairman of a special committee investigating whether Government agencies have exceeded statutory or constitutional authority, took particular exception to a statement in Childs' article that efforts to "undermine" the Price Control Act had a "stealthy, skulking look."

Investigations Reviewed

Smith reviewed the history of his committee's investigations in "open hearings, conducted day after day and month after month" in which "wronged citizens" and agencies complained against were given equal opportunities to be heard.

"Is there anything sinister or skulking about that?" he asked.

Smith launched a bitter exchange when he asserted that in his opinion "no member of the House could truthfully stand up and say he had received no complaints" against the OPA exceeding its authority.

Representative Cochran (D., Mo.) interrupted to say he had received no such complaints, and Smith replied he "congratulated him on such complacency of his constituency."

"There is nothing stealthy or skulking about what I am doing or have been doing," Smith shoted.

Tells of Complaints

When his special committee was created, the Virginian said, it began work first on the OPA because he had received "the most and the most persistent" complaints against that agency.

Since the committee was established, he said, five intermediate reports have been submitted to Congress, adding these reports were widely publicized when made and copies were furnished to every member of the House.

Addressing himself directly to the Republican side of the House, Smith said the amendments proposed by his committee to the OPA Act would give Republicans an opportunity to "live up to your campaign promises that you were going to save the coutnry from bureaucracy."

"Boys," he asked, "are you game, or are you going to run when the CIO political action committee yells?"

Asked if he would give the Democrats the same opportunity, Smith replied "Indeed I am."

Appley Quits Post at WMC; Hay Is Named

War Manpower Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt yesterday announced the resignation of Lawrence A. Appley, executive director and deputy chairman of WMC, and the appointment of WMC General Counsel Charles M. Hay as Appley's succesor.

Tre resignation—for reasons of health—will be effective on July 1.

Appley, vice president of the Vick Chemical Co., New York, has been with WMC as executive director since January, 1943. He became deputy chairman in addition when Fowler Harper resigned the post in June of last year.

Hay, a St. Louis attorney, has served as city counselor of St. Louis, in the lower house of the Missouri Legislature, and as chairman of the St. Louis Board of Election Commissioners. He has been counsel of the Railway Labor Executives Association and represented the railroad brotherhoods during the trial of the 1938 railroad wage case. In 1936, he was a special assistant to the attorney to defend the Railroad Retirement Act.

Appley, in a letter of resignation, explained, "The medicos have finally persuaded me to withdraw from current responsibilities. Immediate attention from them, followed by a period of rest under their supervision, should put me back in excellent health in a few months or so. It is only fair, however, to this organization that I should withdraw during this period of uncertainty as to my health and let a successor take over."

In reply, McNutt said: "Your reasons are compelling, and I recognize them as such. One can give his heart, mind and energies to the performance of a given task, but should not sacrifice his future usefulness or his life needlessly. You have already rendered an invaluable service to the Nation in its hour of crisis and have a perfect right to the satisfaction of accomplishtment."

During Appley's incumbency the WMC developed and pushed its program for the channeling of workers to needed jobs. This program is to be placed into effect on a Nation-wide basis by July 1, when Appley is slated to depart.

Loose-Talking General Loses Rank and Post

Henry J. F. Miller has been demoted from temporary major general to his permanent rank of lieutenant colonel and sent back to this country because he told a group of cocktail party guests in London that "the invasion will take place before June 13."

COL. MILLER

The story was held up until yesterday by censorship. Miller had been commander of the Ninth Airforce Service Command in Britain since October, 1943.

More than two months ago Miller was reported to have told the social gathering:

"On my honor the invasion will take place before June 13."

A woman reported him to security police, and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower immediately ordered the disciplinary measures.

Miller was head of the Air Service Command in Washington in March, 1942, and then was assigned to the European theater.

He was born in Salem County, N. J., September 10, 1890, and was graduated from West Point in 1915.

A cavalry officer at the outset of the last war, he took up aviation in 1918, and went to Britain in October of that year.

WLB Orders Wright Workers Back to Jobs to Speed Victory

By the Associated Press

The War Labor Board yesterday ordered striking employes of the Wright Aeronautical Corp., Lockland, Ohio, to return to their jobs immediately and requested CIO President Philip Murray and R. J. Thomas, president of United Auto Workers, to "lend all possible cooperation" in terminating the tieup.

The WLB acted within a half-hour after the conciliation service certified the dispute. In a telegram to local union leaders, the WLB said:

"At this critical moment in the life of our nation no group of workers can be permitted to place their grievance above the immediate needs of the armed forces."

Engine Production Stalled

Production of airplane engines and parts was stalled for the third day at the big Wright plant in the wake of an army officer's plea to "help the invasion and halt this monkey business."

Although a company official estimated only 450 employes, who went out Monday after seven Negro workers were transferred to a cylinder department which had been manned previously by only white personnel, were bona fide strikers, between 12,000 and 15,000 were away from their jobs.

Approximately 6000 others remained on duty at one shop and three foundries, but two shops were out of service and assembly line work on completed units was halted.

The back-to-work appeal was made by Col. George Strong of the AAF Central District Procurement Office before the employes. Spokesmen for the firm and the CIO United Auto Workers Union said the strike was unauthorized.

The number of idle in scattered labor controversies was 18,300.

125 Women Strike

A work holiday, voted by 125 women employes of the Harley-Davidson Motor Co., at Milwaukee, Wis., resulted yesterday in the halting of production of motorcycles for the armed services at the plant. About 2000 are employed by the company.

Leonard Hackert, president of the United Automobile Workers (AFL) Local at the plant said the holiday was voted by the women last night after the company and union officials had failed to agree on interpretation of a War Labor Board directive setting up a new wage rate range for them.

Hackert said that when the men employes reported today and learned that the women had decided on a work holiday they decided on their own not to work.

At York, Pa., a Navy officer suspended indefinitely 52 workers of the special ordnance plant of the York Safe and Lock Co. under Navy operation since January 17—because, he said, the employes stopped work and left the plant Monday night and early Tuesday.

Comdr. H. K. Clark, in charge, said the situation was "very serious" because the men "violated the War Labor Disputes Act, in which Federal law provides against stopping, walking out or striking against a plant which has been taken over and is operated under executive order of the President." He said the matter would be referred to the Navy Department for further action.

Control Is Extended To Art Importing

The Treasury yesterday extended import controls to cover art objects, with a view to possible salvage of treasures looted by the Axis.

A license now will be required for release from customs of art objects worth $5000 or more, or "of artistic, historic or scholarly interest."

The regulations do not apply to art objects imported from the British Empire, which already controls such shipments.

even more might receive similar authorization to bolt the party and vote for "any Democrat" in preference to the party ticket chosen at the national convention.

[In the event of a close race between the Democratic and Republican presidential candidate in the November election, the anti-New Deal Democrats argued, then the election would be thrown into the House of Representatives as in the Hayes-Tilden contest of 1876.

[Such action would result, it was pointed out, if neither presidential candidate should receive the necessary 266 of the 531 presidential electors required for election.—Editor's Note.]

Georgia to Bar Negroes

Atlanta, June 7 (AP).—Georgia's Democratic Party leaders reaffirmed the principle of white supremacy today, and directed county electoral officials to deny Negroes voting privilege in the State's July 4 Democratic primary.

A subcommittee of the Democratic State executive committee, composed of all general officers, adopted a resolution sustaining the party rule that only white electors may participate in the primary, and directing that copies of the resolution be sent to chairmen of Georgia's 159 Democratic county executive committees.

Missouri Labor Backs Roosevelt

Jefferson City, Mo., June 7 (AP). A resolution appealing to President Roosevelt to accept nomination for a fourth term in the White House because "he is the right man in the right place" was shouted through the State convention of the Missouri Federation of Labor today.

Democrats Still Ahead

By the Associated Press

Congressional Republicans yesterday joined with New York members of the party in crowing about the GOP's success in electing a representative from a New York City district which had been Democratic for 30 years. The Democrats retained the seat in another special election in Brooklyn, thus staying five votes ahead of the GOP House contingent of 211.

Representative Fish (R. N. Y.) told the House that the Republican victory in the Eleventh New York District "shows the tide is running out against the New Deal, the fourth term and the Communist influences in the Democratic Party."

Representative Dirksen (R., Ill.) was the beneficiary of a move by a group of House Republicans who urged that he be chosen the vice presidential candidate on a ticket they thought would be headed by Dewey.

Dirksen is an announced candidate for President, but at a testimonial dinner in his honor Tuesday night his sponsors urged he be given the No. 2 post.

"Let's be frank and honest," Representative Keefe (R. Wis.) declared. "We want Everett Dirksen to be our candidate for Vice President."

"I suggest a new D. D. degree for the Nation," Republican Eaton (R. N. J.) said. "Let's make it Dewey and Dirksen."

"The Maryland State Republican Convention indorsed him for Vice President," Representative Beall (R., Md.) asserted. "We urge the Nation to follow our example."

Admiral Talked Churchill Out of Going to France

London, June 7 (AP).—It took a lot of persuading to keep Prime Minister Churchill from accompanying the forces that stormed the beaches of France, it was disclosed today.

Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay, Allied naval commander, told a correspondent that he persuaded Churchill "only with much difficulty" not to go along.

Ramsay said he pointed out to Churchill that the extra work involved in safeguarding him would be very great—and the Prime Minister finally agreed to stay behind.

Nazis Rush Troops by Air To Normandy

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 (AP).—Savage fighting for key points behind the Normandy beachheads was developing tonight as the Germans began moving troops by air in efforts to cope with constantly reinforced Allied air-borne divisions.

The Allied operation was a complete success, at least as far as its shock phases were concerned, and parachutists and air-borne infantry were ranging swiftly behind the German front lines.

Authorities were tight-lipped about the progress of troops that landed from the sea, but stated the air-borne soldiers had carried out every assignment given them, and in some cases had seized bridges which the command had been almost certain the Germans would have time to demolish.

Bridges Taken North of Caen

It was confirmed tonight, for example, that the British Sixth Air-Borne Division had captured a series of bridges north of Caen.

Front dispatches said air-borne troops had joined those from the sea in some places after capturing towns, roads and various bridges, and that reinforcements poured in today aboard a 50-mile-long train of Ninth Air Force gliders.

The German radio yesterday listed four to six Allied air-borne divisions as having landed behind the Atlantic Wall defenses, and said tonight another British division had landed today.

The continual mass attacks left the entire Cherbourg Peninsula dotted with white and colored parachutes as the fighting flared up over a constantly widening area.

Planes Reinforce Troops

During last night and today hundreds of transport planes flew in reinforcements in men, artillery, jeeps, ammunition, gasoline and food, to the beachhead forces as well as to the air-borne troops deep inside the peninsula. Many tons of vital supplies were thus delivered by parachute.

It was known that Germany's air-borne expert, Lieut. Gen. Kurt Student, who planned the Crete operations of 1941, has been training new forces in western Europe for four months, and was reported in France less than six weeks ago.

The Allied air-borne operations, however, were o a gigantic scale, never employed by the Germans, and included new wrinkles never before tried.

37 District Men To Report Today For Active Duty

Thirty-seven District men, of whom 13 are Negroes, have been ordered to report for induction into the armed forces today. Twenty-three will report to the Army, 11 to the Navy and 3 to the Marines.

To the Army will go:

To the Navy will go:

Ralph W. Bromley, Lemuel H. Crawder, Russell L. Dyer, James M. Fisher, William O. Hallwin, Emory P. Hyland, Samuel Perry, Benjamin F. Poole, white, and Ulysses L. Hickerson, George D. King, Maurice B. Tilghman, Negroes.

To the Marines will go:

Frederick E. Guy, Delmar K. Harrison, white, and Cardell Posey, Negro.

Area Army Posts Cut Paper Use

Baltimore, June 7 (AP).—A 40 per cent saving of paper used by the Army in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia, will result from a requirements survey and subsequent revision of all official publications at Third Service Command Posts, Maj. Gen. Philip Hayes announced today.

Publications affected included headquarters and post memoranda, general and special orders, circulars and bulletins, all in the Army's formal directive channels, the general explained.

General Hayes said he had been informed in Washington that the Third Service Command had taken the lead in this survey and that its results were so successful similar surveys had been suggested for all the country's service commands.

Commanded First Landing Boat

LIEUT. ABE CONDIOTTI, reserve Navy officer of Brooklyn, N. Y., commanded the first boat to hit the shore on D-Day, according to an eye-witness account. Officer in charge of the first wave of landing boats, Condiotti led his force to the enemy-held shore, grounding on the French coast within 60-seconds of H-Hour on Tuesday and delivering members of the United States infantry company to launch the first attack on the Nazis

Biddle Urges 2-Year Extension Of War Powers

Attorney General Biddle asked Congress yesterday in a letter to Speaker Rayburn (D., Texas) to extend the second War Powers Act for two years.

Biddle said the act did not expire until December 31, 1944, but "it appears now the powers which it grants will be needed beyond that date and there is no way of telling when the need for them will expire."

Sidwell Friends School Presents 38 Diplomas

Thirty-eight students of the Sidwell Friends School received diplomas last night from Board of Trustees President James Austin Stone in ceremonies at the school, 3901 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Candidates for graduation were presented by Headmaster Edwin Cornell Zavitz. Following remarks by Trustee John Putnam Marble, the Rev. Peter Marshall of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church delivered a commencement address on "Who Can Take It?"

3 Rail Workers Killed in Mishap

Fredericksburg, Va., June 7 (AP). Three Negro employes of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad's rail-laying force died yesterday from injuries received in an accident near Brooke Station, north of this city.

The men had just boarded a motor car trailer to return to their home when one man was said to have fallen from the trailer, pulling a second one with him. The car was then derailed and the third man injuries.

Harvey Fell and Eldood Alexandria died almost instantly and the third man, Walter Bospet, died several hours later in a Fredericksburg hospital.

A Plea For United Nations Relief

SPEECH

By HON. CLARENCE CANNON
Chairman, House Appropriations Committee,
June 3, 1944

A Solemn Hour

Mr. Chairman, this is a solemn hour—here and throughout the world. It is a moment for serious thought and self-examination. We are face to face with a crisis in American and world history. It is a matter of regret that at such a time we approach a problem like this, upon which so much depends, both here and abroad, with bickering innuendo about juggled funds and the New Deal. Now, honestly, who in the world wants to juggle funds when over across the seas, within the next few days, events of the gravest import are pending?

I hesitate to mention, even with bated breath, the number of men who are going to be wiped out. Does it not behoove us at such a time to subordinate all personal or party considerations?

Let Army Chiefs Handle It

The bill was not brought here for any partisan purpose. Everyone knows that. It was brought here solely to further the war effort. It was brought here to insure and accelerate American victory. This item was written in here merely as insurance against emergencies, and in the belief that if we left determination as to time and place to the Joint Chiefs of Staff there could not possibly be any taint of mercenary political advantage. We proposed leaving it to the commanders in the field. Surely no one could object to that. But you have voted it down.

Now upon whom do you propose to depend? Shall we be governed by the prejudices of men voting as they have voted here today, or shall we depend upon Army chiefs over there in the blood and the dust and the grime, carrying the responsibility of hundreds of thousands of men under their command, with the crushing responsibility of defending the honor and integrity of the Nation at home?

Action Needed Now

These are the men the committee has designated to handle this matter. You have rejected them. I do not know whom else you could select, in a time like this, when we are confronted by a purely military problem. But by this vote this afternoon you have said you are not willing to trust the Chiefs of Staff, and you say if money is needed, "Why, Congress will still be in session." How long do you think it would take to get money for this or any other purpose if you operated as you have this afternoon? We cannot tell when the hour of need will come. If we are to judge the future by the past, the enemy might cave in within 24 hours. That is a possibility. It has happened before. It happened in the last war. How long would it take our men in the Italian field to get word over here and get a proposition through a House in which every immaterial fact might be expected to be contested, as has been contested here this afternoon?

A No-Confidence Vote

This vote is going out to the country. It is going out to our troops over there. It is not going to bring any consolation to our allies in China or on the Continent fighting a deadly enemy desperately at bay. It is not going to help the situation. The bill and the provision you have taken out of the bill say, in effect, that this money cannot be used and will not be used until we have achieved success in the field. We must end the war or we must take new territory before we need or can use this money, and by striking out that provision you say by your vote that you have no confidence in the early success of the American forces at the front, no confidence that in the near future they will win or that they will take new territory. That is what you are telling the people across the seas. That is the word they will receive over the radio in the next few minutes if they have not had it already.

And what have you gained by it? For what mess of pottage have you made this incredible sacrifice? Not a thing. The money is still there. It has already been appropriated and can be spent any time for lend-lease purposes, and you haven't held up a cent of it. All you have is the dubious satisfaction of saying you amended the bill by denying the American Chiefs of Staff the right to say when it can be used if it is not used for lend-lease.

Support Our Field Commanders

You are preaching defeatism at this time of all times. Never in the history of the country, from Bunker Hill down to Cassino, has there been a time when our Armies and our commanders at the front needed and deserved the loyal, united, wholehearted support of the Congress and the Nation. If the opportunity comes soon, as we hope it will, the Joint Chiefs of Staff will be in a position where they must say: "We need it now, but we will have to wait for those politicians over there to mill around on the floor of the House and get it to us, and in the meantime precious time must be lost. We have the supplies right here, and we need them, but we cannot use them because our hands are tied by a vote in the House on June 3, 1944. It is not a partisan measure. It is a humanitarian measure. It is an American measure. It is a patriotic measure. God help us when we look at it from any other point of view.

AS A PUBLIC SERVICE,

we present this important speech delivered after the House had voted to cut UNRRA's funds by $350,000,000.00.

Top U. S. European Ace Feels He's Benched for All-Star Game

By George Connery

Maj. Robert S. Johnson, 24, leading American ace in the European theater with 27 German planes to his credit, yesterday flew into Washington with his pretty red-haired wife, feeling "like a football player kept out of the big game because of a strained ankle." He learned of the opening of the liberation drive just as he was boarding a plane in England for the flight to New York.

His reaction to current combat flying in Europe, he summed up this way: "I can't say I want to get back immediately, but I wish this had come off while I was still there."

Johnson repeated at his press conference yesterday the commendation of Second Lieut. Harold Evans Hartney, jr., that he had first voiced in an interview while still in England. Hartney, the son of Lieut. Col. Harold Hartney, retired, and Mrs. Hartney of 3130 16th st. nw., has since been reported missing in action. Hartney's first flight as Johnson's wingman was Johnson's last mission. On that day Johnson shot down two German fighters and Hartney damaged one in the course of an ambush high in the clouds.

Johnson also said that June Hartney Yeager, a Red Cross worker, saw her brother in England on the day he was shot down over Germany. The meeting was another link in a chain of coincidences involving the Hartney family. Lieut. Col. Hartney was the commanding officer of Eddie Rickenbacker, leading ace of World War I. Mrs. Yeager's husband, Capt. Fred J. Yeager, is a prisoner of war, captured by the Japanese on Bataan.

German pilots now aren't as good as a year ago, Johnson explained, for two reasons. "When you get shot down two or three times in one day, the way some of the Germans have been lately, and the way some of the RAF boys were in the Battle of Brtain, you lose a lot of your zest."

Many Inexperienced

Also, there seem to be a large percentage of inexperienced German fighter pilots.

A year ago the Germans—good ones, too—would meet the Americans well out on the Channel and engage them all the way to their target. Fortunately, Johnson implied, the targets weren't so far away then.

The Thunderbolt escort fighter today is a better ship than the Focke-Wulf, but 12 months ago they were just about equal. "I think our planes have been improved about twice as fast as theirs," the American ace said.

Not Daredevil Type

Thirteen months of combat hasn't made a daredevil out of Johnson. He was emphatic about that. Pausing, he said measuredly:

"The longer I flew and the more I saw the more I understood all the things that could happen to me. I became more and more cautious." Toward the end, he said, he was more nervous on each succeeding mission—until he saw the German fighters. After combat started, it was the same old thing and no time for nerves.

Pope Requests Peace Articles

Vatican City, June 7 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XII received a group of Allied war correspondents this evening, and said to them:

"Peace should be the motive of your writing, and war should be merely a means to peace. Write on war as a means to peace and write in favor of a peace which can be stamped with approval by every well-meaning individual and all people, a peace which can assure to one and all the conditions necessary to live in a manner befitting the dignity of human nature."

The Pope for the first time received a woman dressed in trousers. She was Eleanor Packard of the United Press, who arrived in Rome with the Fifth Army, with no other clothing but her correspondent's uniform, including slacks. The Pope smiled at her understandingly and handed her a rosary and picture of himself.

U. S. Fliers Bomb Ships Off Truk

By the Associated Press

American planes attacked a group of enemy cargo ships northwest of Truk on Monday and damaged one of the vessels, while other planes not far away were battering the enemy installations at Guam, captured by the enemy early in the war.

The Navy reported also that on Monday other planes attacked Nauru to the southeast and Ponape to the east of Truk.

Other planes struck on airfield runways on Millie, one of the Japanese positions cut off from reinforcement and support on the eastern fringe of the mid-Pacific Marshall Islands group.

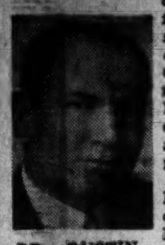
Local Clergymen Mentioned For Methodist Bishop Posts

By Robert Tate Allan

Several local and nearby clergymen were being mentioned as potential candidates for Methodist bishops, as the Northeastern jurisdictional conference opened sessions yesterday in Ocean City, N. J. A number of local laymen and clergy are among the delegates.



DR. RUSTIN

Dr. Harry W. Burgan, pastor of Hamline Methodist Church, and president of American University's board of trustees, and Dr. Fred G. Holloday, president of Western Maryland College, Westminster, and former pastor of Cherrydale (Va.) Methodist Church, are being considered as candidates, and also the following:

Dr. Frederick P. Corson, president of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., and Dr. Lewis O. Hartman, editor of Zion's Herald, Boston, both well known here, and Dr. Frederick B. Newell of New York City.

There is little likelihood of a newly elected bishop being assigned to the important post of Washington resident bishop, according to informed Methodist circles. The position here requires an experienced bishop, it was emphasized by one clergyman. Newly-elected bishops will be placed at Syracuse, Boston and Philadelphia.

MRS. MORGAN

Bishop Charles Wesley Flint, of the Syracuse area, and former president of Syracuse University, appears to stand the best chance of being assigned to Washington. If chosen he would succeed the late Bishop Adna Wright Leonard.

Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, of the Boston area, may be shifted to New York area to succeed Dr. Francis McConnell, who is retiring. Other vacancies must be filled in Philadelphia, where Edward C. Richardson is retiring, and in Syracuse.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, 77, will retire as acting Washington resident bishop at the Ocean City conference. Other local delegates are as follows:

Dr. John R. Edwards, retiring West Washington Methodist District superintendent, and new associate pastor of Foundry Methodist Church; Dr. Horace E. Cromer, East Washington district superintendent; the Rev. Orris G. Robinson, pastor of Calvary Methodist Church; Dr. John W. Rustin, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, and pastor of Mount Vernon Place Church; Dr. Robert L. Wood, incoming pastor of Francis Asbury Church; D. Stewart Patterson of the Methodist Commission on Chaplains; Henry Gilligan and O. O. Thomen, president and past president, respectively, of the Washington Methodist Union; Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, president of the Washington Council of Churchwomen and of the Baltimore Conference Woman's Society of Christian Service.

Nine Sent to Prison In Immorality Transport Cases

Salt Lake City, June 7 (AP).—Nine members of the "fundamentalist" cult today were sentenced to Federal prison terms ranging from one year and one day to four years and one day.

Six were convicted of Mann Act violation for transporting plural wives across State line for immoral purposes and three were convicted of kidnaping for transporting a 14-year-old girl, who later became the polygamous wife of one of the defendants.

Charles Zitting, sentenced to two years, said, "we didn't think we were doing any harm"

Fleeing Japs Outdistance Pursuers East of Kohima

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, June 7 (U.P.)—Fleeing so rapidly that pursuing imperial patrols were unable to keep contact with them, decimated Japanese forces are in general retreat east of Kohima, the Southeast Asia Command announced today, indicating an imminent collapse of the entire enemy position at the northern end of the Manipur front.

The sudden Japanese withdrawal was ascribed to heavy losses. Abandoned by the enemy were the villages of Chakhabama and Chozumi, 6 and 14 miles east of Kohima.

Few of the retreating Japanese were expected to reach Burma. Their road back lies over washed-out jungle tracks through forbidding hills.

South of Kohima imperial troops captured an enemy position on the Aradura spur, strategic height dominating the road to Imphal.

The imperials also scored gains at the edge of Imphal plain, on the southern Manipur front.

Meanwhile, Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's Chinese and American forces in northern Burma were closing in relentlessly on Kamaing, in the Mogaung Valley, in the face of stiffening resistance. The Allies were within less than 5 miles of the enemy base to the south, 6 miles to the north, and 9 miles to the southeast.

At Myitkyina, east of the Mogaung Valley, Chinese-American troops, supported by planes and artillery, penetrated 100 yards deeper into the southern part of the embattled stronghold. A Japanese counterattack southwest of the town was repulsed.

Five D. C. Area Men Are Killed, Two Missing

Five men from the Washington area have been killed, two are missing, including a former Post employe, and three are prisoners of Germany, it was learned yesterday.

Three of those reported dead by the War Department were lost when a troop transport was sunk by enemy action in the Mediterranean on April 20.

Killed were:

Tech. Sergt. Joseph Levin, whose sister, Mrs. Lillian Kayson, lives at 125 Hamilton st. nw.

Pfc. Anthony Arcaro, whose mother lives at 4116 13th st. nw.

Pvt. Victor G. DeVakos, whose mother lives at 813 F st. ne.

Pvt. Roy L. Gilbert, whose wife lives at 105 West Cameron rd., Falls Church, Va.

Pvt. Burnet W. Lamont, whose mother lives at 1651 Mount Eagle pl., Parkfairfax, Alexandria, Va.

Missing Are Listed

Missing are:

Lieut. A. Edwin Stern, whose parents live at 3101 Chesapeake st. nw.

Lieut. Herbert E. Fritts, whose parents live at 2418 3d st. ne.

Taken prisoners were:

Lieut. Francis J. Boyle, whose wife lives at 2812 5th st. ne.

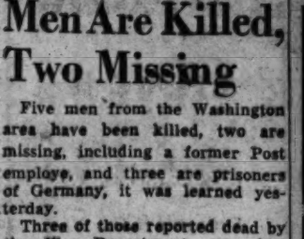
Tech Sergt. George F. Danehower, whose wife lives at 1811 A st. se.



STERN LEVIN

Sergeant Levin and Privates Arcaro and DeVakos were among 504 men previously reported missing in the sinking of a transport.

A ground crew chief with the Army Air Forces, Sergeant Levin is a native of Washington and former student at McKinley High School. Before entering the service in November, 1941, he was employed by the Carpel company here. He received an honorable discharge from the Marine Corps in 1940 after some two years' service.

Private DeVakos, 21-year-old photographic laboratory technician with the Air Forces, also was a Washington native. A graduate of Eastern High School, he was assistant scoutmaster of Boy Scout Troop 13 and a senior air-raid warden. He worked as a movie operator at the Carolina Theater before entering the service in March, 1943.

Former Post Copy Boy

Lieutenant Stern, former Post copy boy, was reported missing over Germany on May 24 while serving as bombardier-navigator on a Flying Fortress. The 21-year-old flier holds the Air Medal for achievement in Eighth Air Force raids over Europe.

He is a graduate of Central High School and was attending George Washington University when he enlisted in the Army the day before Pearl Harbor.

Lieutenant Fritts has been missing in action over Germany since May 24, according to his parents. He had been serving as a fighter pilot with the Eighth Air Force in England since March.

After graduating from McKinley High School in June, 1940, he did installation work for the Western Electric Co. He was inducted into the Army Signal Corps in February, 1942, and a year later was transferred to the Air Forces.

Lieutenant Boyle, 24-year-old Flying Fortress navigator, was reported prisoner after previously being listed missing over Germany on March 6. He completed 12 missions since he arrived in England last December and holds the Air Medal.

Has Brother In Service

Born in St. Louis, Mo., he attended Catholic University on an athletic scholarship before his induction in June, 1941. His brother, Lieut. John H. Boyle, is serving with the Naval Air Corps in San Diego, Calif.

Lieutenant Dunlevie, pilot of a Liberator bomber, was previously reported missing in a raid over Germany on March 22. A native of Savannah, Ga., he was employed by a sugar broker there before entering the service in August, 1942.

Sergeant Danehower, 22-year-old radio technician on a Flying Fortress, was also previously reported missing when he failed to return from a raid over Germany on March 6. A veteran of 23 missions from his English base, he holds the Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal.

Born in Gadsden, Ala., he was foreman of a machine shop there before his induction in October, 1942. His wife is an employe of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Typhus No Longer Imperils U. S. Soldiers, Gen. Fox Says

"Typhus has been removed from the list of diseases fatal to the American soldier," said Brig. Gen. Leon A. Fox, field director of the U. S. Typhus Commission, at a press conference in the Pentagon Building yesterday.

General Fox who has just returned from the European theater for a conference here on typhus, is credited with having saved Naples last January from what might have been one of the worst typhus plagues in history, and with having stopped the epidemic in record time.

This accomplishment General Fox attributes to two things, the Army's DDT powder and the "complete cooperation given me by the commander of that area."

In one day during the typhus epidemic in Naples, on January 10 to be exact, General Fox's "typhus team" treated 73,000 people with DDT powder. Having arrived in Naples on December 20, when the epidemic was just getting under way with the civilian population, General Fox went to work with his crew and by February 1, at a time when ordinarily there would be 500 cases a day reported, there were only 5 to 6 a day, and the epidemic was over.

Calling typhus one of the world's worst killers, General Fox said that during World War I, typhus killed more people than all of the implements of war, that in Russia and Poland alone 30 million people contracted typhus and over five million died of it.

A strictly human-louse-borne disease, typhus has been particularly hard to control in the past because of the poor sanitary conditions in beleaguered countries.

Each soldier carries a small can of DDT powder even though he has been vaccinated.

D. C. Aviation Student, 3 Others Die in Crashes

Greenville, Tex., June 7 (AP).—Two airplane crashes within 35 minutes of each other were fatal today to two officers and two aviation cadets at the Amjora Field basic pilot training school, Col. Herbert M. Newstrom, commanding officer, announced.

The dead included: Joseph T. Parker, 20, of Washington, D. C., student.

9 Washington Area Fighting Men Decorated

The Silver Star, awarded for gallantry in action, has been presented to Col. Charles B. Lyman, 1717 Foxhall rd. nw., for leading advance elements against the Japanese on Dutch New Guinea.

His decoration was one of nine awarded to men for the Washington area that were announced yesterday. Oak Leaf Clusters in lieu of a second Air Medal went to:

Lieut. Ernest W. Reese, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Husted, 3012 M st. se., who was cited for completing sustained flight missions in unarmed transports that carried supplies and troops to the front lines of the South Pacific.

Lieut. Frederick G. Harting, son of Mrs. Frederick G. Harting of 62 Farragut pl. nw., decorated for "meritorious achievement" as a Liberator navigator while participating in operational flights from a base in Italy.

Lieut. Cletus T. Hord, son of Mrs. Lesbia W. Hord, 6645 Georgia ave. nw., for serving as copilot on a Fortress completing eleven bombing attacks on the German-occupied continent.

Staff Sergt. Arthur B. Campbell, jr., whose parents live at 27 Randolph pl. nw., decorated for bombing missions in the South Pacific.

Sergt. Robert F. Pond, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. R. Pond, of Lawyers rd., Vienna, Va., cited for "meritorious achievement" in heavy bombardment missions over continental Europe.

Air Medals have been awarded to:

Col. Benjamin J. Webster, executive officer of a Fighter Wing in England, whose wife lives at 1646 Mount Eagle pl., Alexandria, Va., decorated for "extremely meritorious service in flights over German territory."

Lieut. Scott B. Ritchie, jr., son of Col. and Mrs. Scott B. Ritchie of 6811 8th st. nw., decorated for serving as a pilot with the first American A-20 Light Bombardment unit to operate from Ninth Air Force bases in England.

Lieut. Randall Stanley Kramer, jr., copilot on a Liberator serving in Italy and formerly a resident of 1607 19th st. se., cited for completing bombing missions on targets in Austria, Romania, Hungary and northern Italy.

Colonel Lyman, a native of Hawaii, attended schools there, and in 1913 was graduated from West Point. An outstanding athlete, he became one of the Army's best known horsemen.

Lieutenant Harting, a graduate of McKinley High School, attended Benjamin Franklin University and was employed as an insurance adjuster before entering the Army. His wife, the former Miss Claire McMullen, lives at 21 Lincoln ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Lieutenant Reese was a cadet captain at Eastern High School prior to entering the service in June, 1942.

A graduate of Roosevelt High School, Lieutenant Hord joined the Army Air Forces in October, 1940.

Sergeant Pond, 20-year-old assistant radio operator and gunner

Colonel Webster was born in New Haven, Conn., 33 years ago and was graduated from West Point in 1932.

Lieutenant Richie attended the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and was graduated from the Military Academy a year ago. The veteran of 19 missions, he recently escaped injury when his plane was severely damaged by flak. One of the two engines of his light bomber was shot up and the hydraulic system was knocked out. He returned the ship to its base in England and crash-landed.

Lieutenant Kramer was a machinist with the Naval Torpedo Plant at Alexandria, Va., when he joined the Air Forces.

Amazing results in building STURDY BODIES!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach
2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!
YOUNG people, especially those of grammar and high school age, are prone to be deficient in stomach digestive juices and red-blood.
A growing-person who is operating on a 65 to 70% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.
In such cases Nature needs extra help. Organic troubles or focal infection, if they exist, must be corrected. Tissue foods must be digested and rich, red-blood must be present to build sturdy bodies.
S.S.S. Tonic is especially designed (1) to promote the flow of VITAL DIGESTIVE JUICES in the stomach which digest the food so the body can make proper use of it in tissue building and repair and (2) to build-up BLOOD STRENGTH when deficient.
These two important results enable the body to make use of the food as Nature intended. Thus you may gain a keen appetite . . . firm flesh . . . body energy . . . mental alertness!
Build Sturdy Health and Help America Win
Thousands and thousands of users have testified to the benefits S.S.S. Tonic has brought to them and scientific research shows that it gets results—that's why so many say "S.S.S. Tonic builds sturdy health—makes you feel like yourself again." At drug stores in 10 and 20 oz. sizes. S.S.S. Co.

Girl Testifies To Wilkinson's Attack in Car

Santa Ana, Calif., June 7 (AP).—Caprice Capron, 17-year-old dancer, broke into sobs today when cross-examined on her charges that she was raped by Army Capt. Morrison J. Wilkinson, jr., of Washington, D. C., last April 20.

The court-martial trying Captain Wilkinson, 28-year-old former American flight leader in China, recessed for a few minutes and Miss Capron returned with composure regained. Earlier she had been asked why she was smiling while giving testimony.

Wilkinson is tried on charges of bigamy, forcible rape, lewd and lascivious conduct toward women, and jewelry theft. He has pleaded innocent.

"Instead of taking me home he took me to the Hollywood hills," she testified.

Girl Talks of Struggle

She declared that after he began making advances, "I opened the door of the car and he kicked me on the ground. He pulled my hair and bumped my head up and down on the pavement. I kicked him."

"I begged and pleaded for 15 minutes to be allowed to get back into the car," she testified. "I was frightened to death. I had been half-pushed and half-fallen out of the car to the ground. It was cold and foggy and I was chilled."

Miss Capron testified Wilkinson forced her to submit to an unnatural sex act and then raped her.

Asked Her for a Date

She said Wilkinson asked her to marry him and asked for a date the next night. "But I didn't answer him, I was hysterical."

"There were abrasions on my back, some of my hair was pulled out, there was a bump on the back of my head and bruises on my legs," she testified.

Wife Makes Charges

From Mrs. Margaret Wilkinson, 23, private secretary, the Government elicited testimony that Wilkinson last April 17 entered her apartment and forced her to submit to an unnatural sex act.

Upon introduction of a letter—a portion of which referred to how the author of it allegedly had "fondled your beautiful white body"—Mrs. Wilkinson admitted it was written to her by a man she said she planned to marry after her divorce from the Army captain becomes final.

"I have no apologies for my conduct with the other man," she declared. "This is our private affair."

If convicted of forcible rape, Wilkinson could be sentened to life imprisonment or death.

New Yorker First To Land in France

A U. S. Parachute Carrier Base, June 7 (AP).—The first Allied soldier to set foot on the soil of France in the strike from the west was a cigar-smoking parachute troop officer, Capt. Frank Lillyman of Syracuse, N. Y.

Lillyman, 29, was the first man to jump from the lead plane of the parachute troop carriers which went in by the light of the moon before the assault from the sea.

GMC Discharge of Veterans Termed Attack on Contract

The CIO United Automobile Workers charged yesterday that the General Motors Corp. disclosed that CIO unions had requested the discharge of five war veterans under a maintenance of membership contract to undermine the agreement.

Commenting on the disclosure—which appeared in yesterday's Washington Post under a Detroit date line—Representative John E. Rankin (D., Miss.) told the House he hoped American soldiers landing in Europe "aren't reading the daily papers of America . . . or they'll find Sidney Hillman and his racketeering CIO gang are shaking them down to destroy the Government they are fighting for."

In making the disclosure, GM officials had asserted that the corporation would not discharge any of the veterans without an order from the War Labor Board, but yesterday, after Rankin's comment, GM revealed that the five veterans had been discharged from four plants during the period extending from July 13, 1943, to February 1, 1944, for failure to maintain union membership.

Walter P. Reuther, UAW vice president and director of the union's GM division, asserted that "General Motors is attempting to use some returned servicemen as a pretext for undermining its contract with the UAW-CIO," and added, "it is not the first time that corporations have wrapped themselves in the flag."

Reuther stated that the corporation never called the cases to the union's attention. He said that the "poisonous effect of such a misleading story on our soldiers did not deter the corporation from floating it."

"It now develops that of the four men affected who were members of the UAW-CIO, three were allegedly laid off a year ago and one in February of this year," Reuther said. "General Motors is simply climbing on the Montgomery Ward bandwagon in its fight against labor and the War Labor Board."

The fifth man was a member of the United Electrical Workers, CIO, according to a General Motors statement issued in Detroit.

Pearl Harbor Trial Extension Up to Roosevelt

By Robert C. Albright

Congress last night placed on the President's desk compromise legislation extending the legal deadline for prosecution of responsibility for the Pearl Harbor disaster beyond the November elections.

A set-back for House Republicans, who sought to force a show down within the next three months, a conference settlement rushed through both Houses extended the period in which action can be taken to December 7, 1944.

As the existing extension of the statute of limitations expired last midnight, the six months' additional period in which proceedings can be started was hurried to the White House after Congress recessed. The President, if he chose, could stop it with a veto, or by simply not signing.

Representative Short Outvoted

Representative Dewey Short, (R., Mo.), who had led a futile party-line fight to force an early trial, termed the compromise "impotent and innocuous." He was outvoted 213 to 141 on a House roll call, after winning a preliminary division vote to defeat the report.

Under the modified language adopted by the House and Senate conferees, War and Navy Secretaries would proceed "forthwith" with investigation of the facts surrounding the successful Jap attack, and commence such proceedings "as the facts may justify."

Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, Pearl Harbor commanders retired after the attack, already waived immunity from court-martial. Congressional lawyers said this may still leave the door open to prosecution if the statute expires. Neither was mentioned in the bill passed yesterday, which simply designates "such persons" as the Army and Navy heads may determine.

House Democrats had argued throughout that it would disrupt the war effort to bring high Army and Navy officials back from over seas to serve on trial boards. A high Navy official was quoted as saying there was not at the present time satisfactory evidence on which to base charges.

Short, after rallying House Republicans on Tuesday to a show-down demand, yesterday accused the House of "marching back down the hill." He mustered strong GOP support, but enough Republicans broke rank sto forestall a pre election airing of the case.

Enslaved People Of Europe Pledged Relief by Lehman

The Nazi-enslaved people of western Europe were promised by radio yesterday that relief is on the way "even as the tidal waves of armed retribution consigns the tyrants to history's hall of infamy."

Director General Herbert H. Lehman of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration gave the assurance in an address prepared for short wave broadcast.

Asserting "the world knows that your desire is to become as soon as possible self-sustaining and self-determining," Lehman added that "UNRRA has laid the plans for giving you a lift along the road to a secure and free new life."

Debt-Limit Boost Up to President

Legislation boosting the Nation's debt limit from 210 billion dollars to 260 billion dollars, and at the same time reducing the cabaret tax from 30 to 20 per cent, was approved finally by Congress yesterday and sent to the White House.

The measure clears a legal path for the opening June 12 of the 16-billion-dollar Fifth War Loan.

The Nation's debt now is approximately 187 billion dollars. It was 40 billion dollars when America began defense measures in 1940.

Henry O'Neill Elected Head Of CPA Group

By S. Oliver Goodman

The board of governors of the District of Columbia Institute of Certified Public Accountants has elected officers for the coming year as follows: President, Henry A. O'Neill; vice president, William Herbert Danne; secretary-treasurer, John M. Stoy.

Mr. O'Neill was raised from the vice presidency and Mr. Danne from secretary-treasurer. Mr. Stoy was recently reelected to the board for a term of three years. Other members of the board include the retiring president, Millard T. Chariton, and Bertram E. Abramson, Laurence O. Manley, J. Henry Oehmann, John B. Payne, and Julius Sinker.

Mr. O'Neill has been a certified public accountant since 1933 and was accepted into institute membership in May, 1935. He was elected to the board in June, 1943. He is a member of the firm of G. P. Graham & Co. of this city.

Bank Unit to Elect

Members of the safe deposit section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association will elect officers at a dinner meeting June 20 in the Mayflower Hotel, President Florence P. Warner reported yesterday. Capt. Norman B. Hall, USCG, is scheduled to speak on "Port Security."

Postwar Tax Changes Asked

Harold M. Groves, professor of economics of the University of Wisconsin, believes the Federal tax system should be made over after the war so as to encourage risk capital and therefore create new jobs.

In a book—"Production, Jobs and Taxes"—published under the auspices of the research division of the Committee for Economic Development, Groves includes these recommendations:

The excess profits tax—used now as a control on inflation—should be repealed soon after the end of war;

Double taxation on corporate dividends should be eliminated by confining the corporation tax to a withholding levy on dividends and an advance payment on reinvestment income kept by the corporation;

The personal income tax should be the Government's main source of revenue, with a continuing broad base and high standard rate, but with the burden decreased for lower income groups by elimination or reduction of Federal sales and excise taxes;

Tax exemption for income from Government securities should be eliminated on new issues and on outstanding issues, if possible.

Earnings Statements

Gruen Watch Co. reports net income of $940,706, largest in its 70-year history, for the fiscal year ended March 31. This equalled $2.39 per outstanding common share, against $908,079, or $2.30 per share for the previous year.

L. A. Young Spring & Wire Corp. reports consolidated net profit, after provision for renegotiation, for the nine months ended April 30 of $861,925 equal to $2.11 a common share, compared with $509,685 or $1.25 a share in the 1943 period.

Coty International Corp. reports consolidated net profit, excluding nine subsidiaries in continental Europe, for the year ended December 31 of $382,515, equal to 25 cents a share, compared with $297,601, or 19 cents, in 1942.

Baltimore Food Firm Pays $2,556,842 Loan

Baltimore, June 7 (AP).—S. M. Kennedy, executive vice president of the Sprague-Warner-Kenny Corp., said today that the company had paid $2,556,842.07 to the Commercial Credit Corp. in full settlement of a fund loaned for extension.

Kennedy said the corporation, one of the largest wholesale canning and processing concerns in the United States, with combined annual sales exceeding 50 million dollars, had been financed permanently by underwriting of preferred stock and serial 10-year unsecured notes.

Recently Sprague-Warner-Kenny purchased the Western Grocer Co. and Marshall Canning Co. of Marshalltown, Iowa.

Public Offered 60 Million in New Securities

New York, June 7 (AP).—In a rush to clear the decks of private financing before the start of the Fifth War Loan next Monday, investment bankers offered a wide variety of new securities today totaling more than 60 million dollars.

A large syndicate headed by Dillon, Read & Co. offered 30 million dollars of Alleghany Corporation 3¼ per cent secured convertible notes at 102.15. Proceeds will be used, together with other funds, to redeem $21,661,000 of outstanding 5 per cent bonds due in 1949 and $18,036,000 of 5s due in 1950.

Lehman Brothers offered 113,333 1-3 common shares of National Airlines, Inc., at $13.75 a share. The money will be used for expansion purposes by the company, which plans to operate between Jacksonville and New York.

Halsey, Stuart & Co. offered $3,720,000 of Central Railroad Co. of Pennsylvania 2¼ per cent equipment trust certificates at prices to yield from 0.95 to 2½ per cent, according to maturity.

Kidder, Peabody & Co. offered three million dollars of Dallas Railway & Terminal Co. first mortgage serial bonds at prices to yield from 1½ to 3.85 per cent.

Van Alstyne, Noel & Co. offered $1,500,000 of 5 per cent sinking fund debentures of the Drackett Co. of Cincinnati at 100 and interest and 85,000 shares of the company's common at $8 a share.

The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York arranged to sell to dealers from its investment portfolio a total of $17,565,000 of State and municipal bonds.

John W. Cooper Dies; Contracting Magnate

Buffalo, N. Y., June 7 (AP).—John W. Cooper, 73, founder and president of the engineering and contracting firm that bears his name, and a former president of the Associated General Contractors of America, died today.

Born in Suffolk, Va., he is survived by his wife ad a son, Lieut. John W. Cowper, jr., USN, stationed in Washington.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 7 (AP).—General selling which developed at the start of trading continued throughout today's session and all grain futures were down sharply at the close. Traders said yesterday's sharp rally had resulted from heavy short covering and weakened the technical position of the market.

Bearish sentiment was apparent throughout the day and some of the deferred deliveries of leading grains sold at new seasonal lows. There was a lull in the demand for flour but the principal factor in the break in wheat was the harvest, already under way in the Southwest and showing yields that in some sections may average from 20 to 28 bushels an acre.

The Government's June 1 report of crop conditions, to be released Friday, was expected to be much more optimistic than last month's and to indicate a yield of at least 700 million bushels of winter wheat. Substantial improvement in the prospects for other small grains also was anticipated.

Wheat closed 2 to 2¾ lower than yesterday, July, 1.60¾. Oats were off 1⅜ to 1⅝, July, 74⅛@74¼. Rye was off 2¼ to 3¼, July, 1.06@1.06¼. Barley was 1 to 1¾ lower, July, 1.19⅜.

Ward Indicates It Won't Obey D-Day Order

Representatives of Montgomery Ward & Co. yesterday indicated that they did not plan to comply with the War Labor Board's D-Day order extending their Chicago plant contract with a CIO union pending negotiation of a new agreement.

Stuart Ball, counsel and secretary of the mail order firm, told reporters during hearings before a House investigating committee that he did not "see why we should change our principles," unless WLB injected a new element into the order.

John A. Barr, labor relations manager for the company, told the committee that the firm does not plan to sign a maintenance of membership contract. The WLB extension order provides for maintenance of membership, but does not require the signing of a new document—merely the extension of the terms of the old contract which expired on December 8, 1943.

No Comment from Avery

Sewell L. Avery, chairman of the firm, told reporters that he could not comment on the order, since he had not seen it, but indicated that he agreed with Ball.

The hearing was marked by sharp clashes between Ward representatives and committee members.

Barr charged that the War Labor Board had adjusted Ward wages in 1942 in "star chamber proceedings."

Committee Chairman Robert A. Ramspeck (D., of Ga.) pointed out that Avery had said Tuesday that wages were not at issue, and added:

"You are not raising the question, except in an effort to smear the War Labor Board."

During the quesitoning of Barr and Ball, Avery rocked back and forth in his chair, rearranginng matches in a match box on the table in front of him, occasionally interrupting with sharp comments.

He branded Ramspeck's comments as "absurd and unfair," accused him of "insulting" Barr, and said his questions were "unwarranted and offensive" and a "waste of time."

Trickery Charged

When Representative J. B. Clark (D., N. C.), asked Ball whether he thought it would be a good idea for Congress to "wipe out the War Labor Board now," Avery chimed in with, "That would be delightful."

Ball contended that President Roosevelt "ceased to be President and was acting like any individual outside the law" when he issued the executive order seizing Ward's Chicago plants for refusing to obey a previous WLB order extending the CIO contract pending a collective bargaining election.

Ramspeck told Barr, "I think Montgomery Ward made a mistake not to follow the order of the President of the United States. I don't think any order of the President should be resisted by any citizen by force. He ought to carry it into court."

At one point, Avery accused Ramspect of "refusing to accept a single answer," and of trying to "distort this thing in a tricky, trapping way which won't succeed."

Rush Letters To Battle Zone, Army Urges

Officials warned yesterday it may be some time before the flow of mail from the newly established beachheads in Normandy reaches here, but home folks were urged to rush letters to the soldiers in battle.

War Department officials said elaborate and detailed arrangements have been made to speed letters to and from the liberation troops. Army postal units were an integral part of the invasion fleet which sailed from the coast of England against the sandy, shell-torn coast of the continent. They were ready to go into action, the moment the smoke cleared.

This policy was established, officials said because the Army thinks mail is as vital to the fighting American soldiers as "food, guns, clothes and ammunition."

They explained that in the initial phases of the gigantic military operation, mail will be censored on the beachhead and then transmitted to England for reshipment to the United States. Later, it was said, after the military situation becomes more stabilized, letters will flow directly to the United States from France. Facilities for reproducing V-mail were included in the postal equipment which accompanied the landing forces. This will be used to further expedite transmission of letters from troops to their parents and friends here in the United States.

A plea was renewed yesterday for an uninterrupted flow of mail to the men overseas. They emphasized the urgency of keeping up this stream of letters which they termed a "vital and essential morale booster, imperative to the men on the fighting fronts."

Use of V-mail was called "imperative" because supplies to the invasion forces take up great amounts of shipping space.

For the present, letters should be addressed to the same address used before the landing operations.

Year Of Jubilee

Among the numerous solemnities which followed receipt of the news of the liberation was the sounding of the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia for the first time since 1835, when, as every schoolchild knows, the famous bell was cracked while tolling for the death of Chief Justice Marshall. Of course, last Tuesday the bell was not actually tolled; the mayor, Mr. Samuel, simply tapped it—gently, we hope—with a mallet, and the sound was carried over a national radio network.

The Liberty Bell derives its historical celebrity and sanctity from the fact that it was rung in the summer of 1776 to summon the people of Philadelphia to listen to the reading of the newly signed Declaration of Independence. Its name, however, is derived from the Scriptural motto with which it is circumscribed: "Proclaim Liberty Throughout All the Land to All the Inhabitants Thereof." By a kind of historical prescience, this was the motto chosen by the Provincial Assembly of Pennsylvania 23 years before the Revolution, when they ordered a bell for the belfry of their handsome new brick statehouse. Curiously enough, the bell was ordered from an English bell founder, but when it arrived it cracked the first time it was rung. It was then twice melted and recast by two local founders, the famous Messrs. Pass and Stow, whose names were thus immortalized.

The inscription on the bell is out of the twenty-fifth chapter of Leviticus, and the whole verse reads thus:

> And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof; it shall be the year of jubilee unto you; and ye shall return every man unto his own family.

The Hebrew year of jubilee was a sort of supersabbatical year, occurring at the end of every seventh sabbatical year. In the year of jubilee the soil was left fallow; all property which had been lost through misfortune, sloth or bad management or for any other reason reverted to the original owners; and all Hebrews who were in slavery were automatically set free. Set free! It all seems very appropriate.

Portugal's Step

The action of Portugal in agreeing to stop all shipments of wolfram to Germany and shut all her wolfram mines immediately is highly satisfactory. Even more than Spain, Portugal has been one of Germany's principal sources of supply of the steel-hardening ore. Possibly as much as half of Portugal's normal annual production of 6000 tons went to the Reich. Now none of it will be available. Thus another blow is administered to the Nazi steel industry on top of the blow sustained when Spain agreed to cut her shipments of wolfram from 1000 tons to 280 tons a year. Note, moreover, that Lisbon has gone the whole hog in meeting Allied desires. In doing so the Portuguese government is setting an example which Spain and Sweden might well be called upon to imitate.

Portugal's action is also significant in another way. In their efforts to get Portugal to make this move, Great Britain and the United States had the active and most helpful support and cooperation of Brazil, whose advice to Lisbon has had no small bearing on the final outcome of the discussions. In this as in so many other particulars, Brazil is demonstrating that she is both a good neighbor and a loyal ally.

Censorship Abuses

Comprehensive censorship of foreign mail as a precaution against transmission of information helpful to the enemy is an essential and elementary precaution. Censorship for such legitimate purposes is, however, likely to be associated with grave abuses in the absence of adequate safeguards against leakages. The publication of excerpts from the Kellems letters to Count von Zedlitz directed attention to the opportunities for misuse of so-called intercepts from censored mail. It is quite obvious that some person or persons committed a serious breach of trust by permitting the contents of those letters to become public property. Now Senator Reed declares that "there are strong indications of misuse of intercepts of a financial and commercial nature in the Department of Commerce, especially with regard to South America." He also charges that the misuse of intercepts has the makings of a "national scandal" and declares his intention of pressing the investigation now being carried on by a Senate subcommittee to determine the sources of leakages.

Financial and commercial information obtained by the censor is often extremely valuable to both public and private agencies and concerns interested in the development of postwar trade. Consequently the temptation is great to solicit information obtained through censorship channels, by fair means or foul, for ulterior purposes. Prevention of leakages is made more difficult because intercepts go to a large number of interested Government agencies. Obviously the greater the number of individuals having access to this material, the harder it becomes to maintain secrecy. The remedy seems to lie in tightening the circle of the initiated, insofar as possible, and cracking down mercilessly on any person found guilty of betraying secrets of censorship.

Kimmel And Short

It has hitherto been our view that the blame for Pearl Harbor belongs to our system of divided command. Granted the system, as Gen. Billy Mitchell declared a generation ago, there was bound to be a Kimmel and Short at Hawaii when the crisis happened. But only in a classroom can you crucify a system. Mudslingers and political campaigners are not interested at all in such an exercise. They believe in men, not measures. In a campaign year they believe in the crucifixion of men, not in the formulation of measures. These are the "reformers" who have succeeded in prevailing upon the House to vote a resolution directing the Secretaries of War and of the Navy to bring Admiral Kimmel and General Short to trial immediately. The court-martial which hangs over these officers had been postponed till after the war. If the sponsors of the vote weren't interested in making a circus out of the trial, they would have directed the two Secretaries to drop the trial altogether. For there was something anachronistic in the decision when it was made. What Pearl Harbor displayed in sunken ships and blazing material and lost lives and damaged national prestige was the epitaph of a system. Congress has it in its power to get rid of the system and so to expiate Pearl Harbor.

But, assuming that the court-martial order will remain, there are three reasons, as we see it, why the trial should be postponed. First, at a time when all the national energies should be consecrated to the prosecution of the war, this Nation cannot afford to divert time and industry to this court-martial. Secondly, the jurors and witnesses cannot be spared from active duty. For instance, since Kimmel is a rear admiral, there would have to be no fewer than 13 rear admirals detached from their posts in order that Kimmel might be tried by a "jury of his peers." These admirals, not to mention some of the witnesses, are now holding positions of vast responsibility, with the lives of many thousands of men committed to their charge. Thirdly, the sponsorship of immediate court-martial, as is plain from the House debate, and as we have already intimated, is only secondarily due to a concern that justice shall be meted out to Admiral Kimmel and General Short. It is the Republicans who are calling for the trial. In present circumstances that are hell-bent upon making a political circus out of the court-martial. With the elections close at hand, the object is evidently to pin the responsibility for Pearl Harbor upon the Administration, and thus to try to prevent the return to office either of Mr. Roosevelt or his nominee.

We come to these conclusions reluctantly. Constitutionally every American is entitled to a speedy trial when charges have been preferred against him. Admiral Kimmel and General Short are Americans. For 2½ years they have been living under a cloud of undetermined charges, and they and their families have every reason to feel victimized. Moreover, a court-martial would do a great service in clearing the atmosphere of rumor and whispered charge, it would expose the truth in a matter on which the truth must one day be told, it would pave the way for reforms which tradition and vested interest are in cahoots to frustrate. Yet, in spite of these weighty arguments for a court-martial now, the scale tips over very heavily in favor of postponement till after the war. That there is no legal impediment to postponement is indicated by the waiver of the statute of limitations which has been signed by the affected officers.

There is no desire on our part to exculpate the political higher-ups for the tragedy of Pearl Harbor. No doubt some of the dirt which has been flying around since December 7, 1941, will find lodgment on them when the principals are haled to court. However, there is no question that the ultimate responsibility for the miscalled day of infamy will be attached to the system of divided command which governs our national defense. That must be wound up. Even in wartime we have made only slight improvements upon it, such as a joint chiefs of staff, which is an impermanent committee system. A committee such as we have today throws up only the lowest common denominator of the brains composing it. For its decisions are of necessity compromises. In this case they are also vitiated by the fact that they are hortatory; that is to say, recommendations of action to the actual decision makers in the field.

As soon as this war is over, the joint chiefs of staff, if left to themselves, will fly apart, and we shall be back where we were. There is nothing surer in this unsure world. So we say that only at its peril will this Nation let the armed services revert to their prewar organization. What is needed is unity of command on the German model. At present a study of this requirement is in progress in both the War and Navy Departments at the direction of the respective chiefs. It is as if a dispute at law were handed over to the litigants themselves to settle! The new organization of our armed services after this war is a problem which rightfully belongs to Congress. Army, Navy, foreign policy—they should all be brought into a single pattern of organization. This is what Pearl Harbor proved, and no court-martial is needed to make the demonstration.

Reunion In France

Americans are no novelty to the good French folk who live along the curving coast between Cherbourg and Le Havre. Countless tourists from this side of the Atlantic disembarked at these two great ports in a happier invasion than that now in progress. Paris in those days was no more than a two- or three-hour train ride from Le Havre. The somewhat longer journey from Cherbourg ran directly through countryside every foot of which is now being bitterly contested by Rangers and Commandos. In those days, Deauville and Trouville along the invasion coastline were virtually American resorts in the summertime. And a goodly number of our countrymen ranged southward to disport themselves on the more Gallic if somewhat less fashionable beaches at St. Malo and Dinard—or went to gaze with wonder and delight at Mont St. Michel. They came then as friends; and, to the French, they come not as invaders but as friends today.

No doubt there will be a greeting for them. French patriots who for so many bitter months have endured Nazi occupation, silently and eagerly awaiting D-Day, will spring to the side of these friends swarming from the beachheads. As in the past, they will have a proper sense of their own dignity and value, these Frenchmen. For they have fought the common enemy, in their own way, with the implements and opportunities available to them, and with a courage no less heroic than that of our own young men who have come to liberate them. They will be inclined, we think, to look upon our soldiers as equals and Allies, rather than as benefactors. In the old days the French never took well to being patronized. They are likely to be just as hospitable, and just as insistent upon the respect which is their due, today.

It is for this reason that we are fearful of the establishment of any rule in France, even a temporary one, which is not wholly French. No French government is recognized by the United States. The provisional government headed by General de Gaulle, which has mobilized the underground in France to aid us and which has given Frenchmen a symbol of the liberation to come, has received only the most cavalier treatment at our hands. We could have eased the problems of liberation if we had definitely settled this political problem in advance. Now to some extent it will be necessary for us to improvise as we move inland. That improvisation will be effective in proportion as it takes cognizance of French pride and self-respect. We hope the time will not be long in coming when we can deal upon an equal footing with a free government of France. Then we shall be guests again—warmly welcome guests—in that familiar and friendly land.

Jobs For Veterans

Surveys undertaken by the Army at various separation centers indicate that a very large proportion of discharged veterans—40 per cent in one Eastern center—do not want to return to their old jobs and do not even wish to return to their home communities. It may well be that released servicemen feel restless and dissatisfied to an extent that exaggerates the desire for change. Furthermore, they are being let out at a time when opportunities for employment facilitate shifts from familiar uncongenial activities to more satisfying kinds of work. But even allowing for special circumstances that make for restlessness, the results of the survey indicate that the problem of demobilization at the end of the war is going to be more complicated than it appears to be. Not only will former jobs have disappeared in many cases, making promises of reinstatement impossible of fulfillment, but old jobs still available may have lost their allure.

Opportunities for acquiring new skills will be open to veterans as a result of legislation providing for vocational training. Liberal provision will also be made to enable younger men to complete their education. But it may be necessary to curb the desire for change of older men, especially if that desire should take the form of a yearning to enter Federal employment. Fears that veterans might obtain a monopoly of civil service jobs for a long time after demobilization have been voiced by an official of the National Civil Service Reform League. Those fears are by no means unfounded. A member of the Civil Service Commission some time ago declared that the Government is under obligation to open up positions for thousands of returning veterans who had not held Government positions prior to enlistment. As we have previously pointed out, there is no question about the justice of reinstating veterans who left Government positions to serve in the armed forces. However, it would be a national misfortune if, in our zeal to place veterans in congenial jobs, further liberalization of veteran preferences were to be approved.

LULLABY

Lullaby. For you will summer build the green corn aisles for hiding, hang the trees with fruit and laughter,
pile the clover hay for riding.
Lullaby, lullaby.
What children fear the summer sky?
For you along the fields the evening will, listening, wait for you to hear young sleepy bird, the little cricket;
the frailest sound will touch the ear.
Lullaby, lullaby.
What children fear the twilight sky?
Lullaby. Above you cherished lean dark hours with starry heads—
Good-night, good-night, now, all lost children turning in terror-sheeted beds.
May love put back your fallen sky.
Lullaby, lullaby.

New Veterans' Views

A FORECAST of how the boys overseas will react to the home front when they come back is provided by the views of those who have already returned. I had a chance to talk to a large number of them at the Walter Reed convalescent home at Forest Glen last week.

These boys represent some 10 million servicemen who will eventually be coming back. What they have to say is therefore important.

There will be a great tug-of-war for the votes of veterans after all this is over. Pro-Nazi Joe McWilliams, now on trial for sedition, tried to rally the early arrivals by dangling a $7800 bonus in front of them. But if the men at Forest Glen are any criterion, this war's veterans will not be taken in by anyone.

These soldiers, many of whom will go back into civilian life minus an arm, a leg or an eye, are thinking about what is to come. They intend to use their organized influence to get a fair deal, but not in any narrow sense. They are not bonus marchers.

The great majority of them favor forming an entirely new organization for the veterans of this war—a body more representative than any similar organization in the past.

Angered by Home Front

Some of them are bitter about the home front. What bothers them most is not strikes, nor absenteeism (termed "being AWOL" by one vet), nor high wages (though time-and-a-half for overtime drew several cracks from the men on G. I. pay).

What really "burns" these men is the widespread evidence of corruption and the prevalence of the get-rich-quick philosophy in America today. They are not entirely clear about who is responsible, but they feel like giving things a good housecleaning when they return.

"The way they clip you isn't funny," one soldier told me. "People look at you as if they expected you to apologize for being a soldier. I went into a restaurant and I couldn't get served. The waitress looked at me and you could almost hear her thinking, 'Small tip.' I left a big one just to show her. Next time I went in I got served first."

A captain of the Army Air Force whose eyes were injured in a bombing said, "When I went home on furlough I tried to buy a bottle of whisky to celebrate, but the clerk said he was out. But later the same day a civilian friend of mine—a 'regular customer'—got some at the same store."

A soldier with a limp chimed in, "They've got too damn many restrictions. On my 21-day furlough I wanted to drive my car. Went 15 miles to the ration board and back, and all they'd give me was five gallons of gas. I used half of it up going after it. Yet the streets were full of war-workers driving around on B and C cards.

"Don't you think a soldier should be classed as a defense worker? Or maybe we're not essential," he added with a wry grin.

A recurrent theme is the fear of being left out of things at home. "When I went home on furlough after I got well I felt like an intruder," one husky chap remarked. "It's like coming back after being mourned and forgotten. People look at you kind of funny and you have to explain how you happen to be back home."

Hope for Good Jobs

These men will really be bitter if they don't find opportunities to get good jobs or open their own businesses after the war. They feel that the civilians have stolen a march on them while they were away, and they want a fair chance to make up for it.

Lieut. Howard Christenson of Bartlesville, Okla., is about to be discharged because of arm and leg injuries. He owns a 500-acre farm, but can't get the WPB to give him priorities on machines to operate it without a long delay. He thinks something should be done to help returning servicemen get started again.

An officer told me, "One boy went out of here minus a leg. When he left he said, 'All I ask is a chance to make a living.' He wasn't bitter, but if he doesn't get a break he will be."

The G. I. doesn't want to be classed as a hero, but he does expect civil treatment. "Tell those Washington bus conductors they could do with a little common courtesy," one boy suggested. "You ask them to call out a street for you and they act as if you'd asked for their right eye."

One complaint of Negro soldiers, especially those from the North, is the limited entertainment available for them in Washington. One of the few servicemen's canteens in town where Negroes as well as whites are really welcome is the CIO Labor Canteen, which operates only on Sundays and has difficulty getting publicity for its efforts.

I visited this canteen the other night, incidentally, and found a very cordial atmosphere. Here is evidence that the races can meet on equal terms at home as they do on the field of battle, with no untoward consequences.

I suppose that Senator Bilbo would have been shocked to see Negro and white soldiers and girls playing musical chairs and drinking cider and Pepsi-Cola under the same roof. But to this observer they were simply having a good time.

Days Of Decision

By Barnet Nover

As The Big Push Develops

THE ALLIES have won the first round of the climactic Battle of Europe, have won it hands down.

We have breached the redoubtable Atlantic Wall at a number of points. We have landed large numbers of troops on beachheads in Normandy and behind the enemy's shore-line defenses and, apparently, at far less than the anticipated cost.

D-Day demonstrated that we are in absolute command of the western sea approaches to the Continent and command overwhelming superiority in the air. So what happened on June 6 in the region between Le Havre and Cherbourg can and undoubtedly will happen elsewhere along the coast.

The Allied accomplishment during the initial phase of the invasion can only be described as magnificent, a triumph of organization, integration, daring and decision. Dunkerque has been reversed—and revenged.

BUT WE HAVE won only the first round. We must not forget this.

The enemy has been hit hard. He will be hit harder still in the days to come. Soon, in addition to the great Allied push from the west, he will receive hammer blows from the east. And other blows will rain on him from other directions.

But the enemy has not yet been knocked out and it will take many such blows to knock him out.

IT MUST HAVE been apparent to the German high command quite some time ago that Allied landings in western Europe could not possibly be prevented with the force they had on hand.

In fact, Dr. Goebbels months ago abandoned the propaganda line that the Atlantic Wall was unbreachable and began hammering away at the theme that even if the Allies did land, the operation would be extremely costly; that it would be impossible for the Allies to extend their beachheads, and that, in consequence, these beachheads would be so many running sores draining the lifeblood of America and Britain.

In any event, the Germans had to make a virtue of necessity and pivot their anti-invasion strategy not on the Atlantic Wall, but on their possession of interior lines of communication.

IN WESTERN EUROPE the Germans are in possession of a very elaborate network of railroads and motor roads which no amount of bombing could completely knock out.

The best we can hope for is that as a result of our night-and-day bombing of junction points, marshaling yards, signal systems, bridges, locomotives, repair sheds and trackage we have made it difficult for the Germans to concentrate their forces quickly.

We shall soon discover whether this objective has been achieved. If the tactical bombing job has been well done, there will be a sufficient delay before the Germans are in a position to mount any large-scale counter-offensive against our beachheads as to give us time to expand our strength at those beachheads and link them together.

Certainly every day that passes without such a major counter-offensive works to our advantage.

OUR TROOPS are already in Europe in considerable numbers. To keep a constant stream of reinforcements and supplies moving to the beaches we shall sooner or later have to acquire one or more major ports.

One test of our success, therefore, will be how long it takes us to acquire such a port or ports. Nor will that prove an easy task, since all those along the Atlantic coast, the North Sea and the Mediterranean that are in Germany's possession are heavily defended.

On the other hand, the Germans cannot defend all of these ports with equal strength without cutting dangerously into their operational reserves. For just as the Germans did not know where the Allies were going to strike in the first place they cannot be sure where the next blows will fall.

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE to say, of course, just how long it will be before the critical stage of the invasion attempt is reached. It may come in a matter of days, it may not develop for some weeks.

One thing is clear. The Battle of Europe will not finally be won until the German army has been beaten to the point where its will to fight on has been destroyed. We can only hope that that time will come soon. We cannot gamble on that hope.

But, at least the first great hurdle has been surmounted. Germany is now fighting on three fronts. She is being ringed round by a great circle of fire and steel that, in the days ahead, will draw closer and closer to the homesite of the Herrenvolk. The great task of liberation is under way.

Low-Rent Housing

I would like to answer one of Mr. G. W. Hodgkins' points—the last one in his communication in The Post—on economic rent and the low-income family. Mr. Hodgkins is under the misapprehesion that occupants of low-rent public housing are relief families. He states, "Rent is merely one item in a family budget which they cannot meet without some financial assistance."

This is, of course, not true. An average of less than 25 per cent of the occupants of public housing built and managed by the National Capital Housing Authority have been recipients of public assistance other than the rent subsidy. Three-quarters of the renters have been able to finance all of their own requirements out of income, with the sole exception of rent.

The reason is obvious. An urban family of four can manage to exist independently on an income of $25 a week; family budget experts have often proven this to be true. That is they can do so provided their rent budget is no more than one-fifth of their income, or $21.50 a month.

A family of four, even under minimum standards, must have two bedrooms. If two-bedroom apartments or dwellings in the District of Columbia can be found at $21.50 a month, it can automatically be assumed that, with extremely rare exceptions, they are either disease-breeding slum quarters or else that they are dwelling units in one of the National Capital Housing Authority's developments.

Private industry will never be able to build dwellings with monthly commercial — unsubsidized — rents of from $12 to $25. The few that it has built at the top of that bracket have always been so insufficient in number for the demand that institutions such as NCHA have been forced by public opinion and congressional fiat to provide more such dwellings on a nonprofit, public-housing basis. Self-supporting low-income families have been permitted to move out of their slum dwellings into such new quarters. So have, to a much smaller degree, the relief families.

To say that the self-supporting families are themselves "reliefers" is actually to say that any urban family with a net annual income of around $1500 is a relief family! For if they are not "subsidized" so they can live in some public housing development, they are "subsidized" in their slum dwellings by the city, which has to pay as much as 80 per cent of the community services of such depressed areas out of tax income received from the more prosperous areas.

On the whole, occupants of public housing are self-supporting except in one respect—rent. Private industry has not been able to meet their rent budget. This is the reason for the whole public housing program of the past 10 years. Such families are not "reliefers!"

Land Holding

A recent editorial in The Washington Post calling attention to the attack by the Farm Bureau Federation on the efforts of the FSA to enable American farmers to obtain land of their own by means of Government loans is worthy of serious reflection. The spokesman of the Farm Bureau, according to the editorial, expressed the opinion before the House Agricultural Committee that FSA clients do not really own the land they till and that it is better for them to be tenants of a private owner than to be tenants of the Government.

The writer of this editorial establishes an excellent point by saying in rebuttal that "concentration of rural land ownership holds a menace not only for farmers but for all America" [and] "creates the condition out of which European peasantry developed."

Just a few figures from the agricultural census of 1940 reveal that even in a country as progressive and advanced as the United States there is a great concentration of land in a few hands. The Census Bureau reports that in 1940 100,531 farms, or 1.6 per cent of the total number of individual farms in the United States, comprised 364,068,903 acres, which is 34.3 per cent of the total farm acreage. In other words, less than 2 per cent of the total number of farm owners held over 34 per cent of the total acreage of land farmed!

It is highly significant that certain interests are still attempting to add to the number of acres they already control.

Conditions in this respect are even worse in South America. Figures, where available (some South and Central American countries have never attempted to take a census of land holdings), are overwhelming in revealing a tremendous accumulation of land by a comparatively few families.

In these days of improving the conditions of peoples everywhere, the problem of land holding should be honestly studied in every country of the world.

Low-Flying Planes

It would seem that the residents of the Southeast are sort of stepchildren in the minds of the authorities flying commercial or military planes. In the Northwest planes fly at a high altitude, in the Southeast they almost touch the tree tops. This situation is very disturbing to people in their sleep, and to men, women and children at all times. It would be well for our city fathers to give some attention to this matter and see that hereafter planes are kept at a considerable distance from our roofs. J. ANTHONY MARCUS.

Polish-Americans

By Eric Estorick

Divided Minority

THE POLISH POPULATION in the United States has been variously reported by American as well as American Polish leaders as comprising between four and six million people. These estimates are grossly at variance with the statistical figures reported by the United States Bureau of the Census. According to this bureau, there were 2,416,320 persons in 1940 whose mother tongue was Polish. Out of these, 801,680 were foreign-born. This is at most half of the estimate put forward by the American Polish leaders. If we should accept the opinion of Polish leaders it would then appear that they were counting on persons who may be of Polish ancestry, but whose mother tongue is English. It is very doubtful that the latter group would have the same responses to the "Polish question" as people whose mother tongue is Polish. The numerical importance of the whole matter thus seems to have been exaggerated.

Widely Scattered

The Poles are scattered over the whole country. Their primary centers, however, are in big cities like Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee, Cleveland, Buffalo, and small towns in New England, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. The great majority of them are employed in basic industry, such as automobile, steel, coal mining, farm equipment, packing houses; a minority are employed in agriculture, largely as farmers. Many of them belong to various organized groups. These groups are of two kinds—one, Polish national organizations, which are organized on the basis of common language, ancestry and cultural heritage. The other group consists of general American organizations, organized on the basis of American citizenship and professional and economic interests.

Certain Polish leaders like Mr. Wegrzynek, the publisher of the Nowy Swiat in New York, claim that through the influence of Polish national organizations and the press they can control the Polish vote. This claim seems to be most doubtful for two reasons. The first is that the influence of those Polish leaders, who want American Poles to vote according to the interest of Poland rather than the interest of the United States, is quite limited to the Polish national organizations. The second is that, even if they could control Polish national organizations, these organizations have but a limited influence on the political attitude of the American Poles. The membership of all those organizations together does not exceed 700,000, and is likely much lower. The largest of them is the Polish National Alliance, which counts 275,000 members. This, however, is a fraternal organization and its leaders do not necessarily express the political views of the members. As to the Polish language press, the total circulation of the Polish dailies is less than 200,000.

Trade Union Influence

Whatever influence the national organizations may exercise, this influence is subjected to the cross influence of the other group of organizations mentioned above. Among the latter the trade unions are the most important. The major part of the Poles are industrial workers, and most of them are union members. As such they are more forcibly exposed to the political influence of their union leadership and environment than to that of the Polish national organizations. In all the industrial centers with large Polish population the trade unions have special Polish locals, which are led by Polish trade union officials. The Polish trade union leaders follow a political line which is entirely independent of Polish national organizations and which is integrated into the policy of their respective unions. In some places the Polish trade union locals, both CIO and AFL, have combined into American Polish trade union councils. This has been the case in Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee and New Jersey, in the last case as a State organization. On January 16, 1944, a national American Polish trade union conference (CIO and AFL) was held in Cleveland. This conference resulted in the establishment of American Labor Council, which claims to represent 600,000 followers.

The Poles have been known as being among the strongest supporters of Roosevelt in the country. This has been attributed to Roosevelt's favorable foreign policy toward Poland. In accordance with this interpretation a policy of collaboration with Russia may cause the Administration to lose the Polish vote. Upon closer analysis this appears to be based upon a misconception. The real reason of the Poles' support of Roosevelt is to be found in his internal policy rather than in his foreign policy. The Poles are devout followers of the present Administration because they see in him the champion of the common people and in particular of minority groups hitherto discriminated against.

In addition to the consideration described it should be pointed out that a large part of the Poles are heavily involved in local politics, predominantly with the Democratic Party. In cities like Chicago, Milwaukee and Detroit, the Poles occupy in the Democratic Party roles of leadership second only to that of the Irish. Their following has been primarily determined by the policy of the Democratic Party.

Today and Tomorrow

The Single Battle

LIPPMANN

WE MUST now wait through weeks, which may stretch out into months, before the grand design of the battle, and of its progress, emerge from the bits and pieces of news, of rumor, and of enemy propaganda that we shall hear. During the suspense, and the anxiety which must inevitably accompany it, we shall have to measure the good news and the bad by fixing in our minds what General Marshall said on the eve of the assault on the coast of Normandy, that "the final action . . . is now focused on a single battle in which every Allied force will be represented."

These few words tell us more of what we need to know, more of what is in the minds of our own commanders and of the enemy commanders, than we are likely to learn from any other source. After four years of defeat, and then of resistance, and finally of stupendous preparation, the German army, which conquered so much when it could attack the nations one by one, has been brought to a single battle against them all. The battle is single in that on the French front, the Russian, the Italian, the Balkan, and on others that may yet be opened, the German high command must fight not a series of battles but one interlocking and simultaneous battle. In such a battle, which has taken years to prepare and achieve, the more strongly the Germans fight on one front, the greater the opportunities they open up to the Allied command on the other fronts. For the Germans can no longer concentrate overwhelming force on one front as they did when they overran first Poland, and then Norway and then France and then Yugoslavia, and then so large a part of Soviet Russia.

Upon this fact, that no one of the United Nations separately can defeat the German army but that in combination they can, rests the plan of the campaign and our confidence in its success.

WARS FOUGHT by coalitions are notoriously difficult to conduct, and in this one we have learned only too well the heartbreaking difficulties. Here in the summer of 1944 we are engaged in the desperately hard adventure of landing an army in France. In the early spring of 1940 there was a French army of perhaps three million men, and a smaller British, and also a Belgian army, drawn up not on the beaches of Normandy but on the frontiers of Germany. If then, to reinforce France, the Russians and the Americans had been ready or willing to invest even a smallish part of the blood and treasure they are expending since, what a difference it would have made.

This was not to be. It was not to be because inertia and division among the nations had not yet been put to the test of survival. Only through suffering and extremest danger has the unity of the nations been accomplished. We must remember that, even when we proclaim the epoch-making fact that the coalition has been accomplished, and that at the climax of the war it is far closer and stronger than anyone dared to believe it could ever become.

THE SPECTACLE which is now unfolding is awe-inspiring. We see the nations which were formed out of Europe moving in to liberate the ancient continent in which their civilization had its origin. In their geography and in their statehood, the British nations, the Soviet Union, and the American republics are not European. But despite all the variations of their separate development, they are the trunks and the branches out of the same root.

They are the heirs of the ancient Mediterranean world where the enduring forms of western civilization were evolved. And though to the east this tradition descends through Byzantium and in the west through Rome, it is in the end, beneath the schisms and dissensions of a thousand years, one tradition.

THIS TRADITION has been challenged absolutely by the satanic genius of Hitler, supported by the terrible military efficiency of the Prussian-German state. Nothing less than this, perhaps, no challenge less absolute, no power less formidable, could have compelled the jealous and disunited members of western civilization to surmount the separation of centuries. In this final test, which none could evade, they have surmounted it.

As the peril passes, they will tend again to become absorbed in their separate affairs and to go their separate ways. But never again so separately as they did before. The experience is so profound that its effects are irreversible. We are at one of the great turning points: not for much more than a thousand years have western men fought side by side for the rescue and perpetuation of their civilization, and the memory of this undertaking will illumine the long future, and change all men somewhat.

Ignorance Is Sufficient Defense Against OPA, Senate Decides

By Christine Sadler

On a voteof 47 to 27, the Senate yesterday adopted an amendment to the Price Control Act making "ignorance" of a pricing regulation an adequate defense for violating it, and removing the automatic fine now imposed on persons guilty of selling above price ceilings.

As written by the Senate Banking Committee, legislation extending price control sets the fine at not less than one and a half nor more than three times the overcharge, or $50 flat, whichever the court thinks fairer.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) declared removal of the automatic fine provision would be destructive of price control as it represented the only simple way by which consumers could help enforcement.

"It's the only way to deal with cases in which the overcharge has been but a matter of a few cents," he declared. "These cases are much more difficult to handle than those running into many dollars and the failure to control them would weaken the act considerably.

"You cannot regulate millions of transactions without some provision such as this."

Senator Albert B. Chandler (D., Ky.), who authored the amendment, argued OPA regulations were so complex and complicated many persons violated them unknowingly and even after they had taken all "practicable precautions" against occurrence of the violation."

OPA officials said the fine had prevented many cases from reaching the courts, and saw its removal as a gesture which would work against consumer efforts to aid price enforcement.

Blow at WLB Ruled Out

Meantime, the House voted down a ruling by the House Rules Committee which would have permitted recommendations on wage stabilization by the Smith House Committee to be considered as germane to price control legislation as reported by the House Banking and Currency Committee.

These recommendations virtually would have changed the Nation's stabilization machinery and upset procedure under which the War Labor Board operates, it was contended.

The issue which influenced the House in its vote, however, was that of usurpation of authority by a committee. Speaker Sam Rayburn rendered a verbal spanking to the Rules Committee for its efforts at legislation.

"The Committee on Rules was never set up to be a legislative committee," he declared. "It is a committee on procedure."

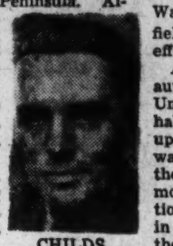
By ruling in the Smith recommendations, he said, the Rules Committee not only overstepped its authority but took a slap at the House Banking Committee, which had "patriotically and sensibly considered for a long time" the price-control legislation.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Home Front Leadership Lags

THE LIBERATION of Rome by Allied troops is bound to speed up the march northward up the Italian Peninsula. Already our forces have advanced a considerable distance beyond the capital in pursuit of the retreating Nazis. While its strategic value may be doubtful, especially in view of the task of feeding a large civilian population, Rome's prestige value is very high.



CHILDS

Then, too, the taking of the city redeems an earlier failure which has been the subject of much discussion among military men. At the time the Anzio beachhead was established, German resistance was so light that our forces might have pushed on to the capital itself.

The orders under which the American commander was operating specified, however, that the invasion should halt at a certain point. Those orders were not exceeded, as they might have been if individual commanders had been prepared to take risks.

Meanwhile, the Germans brought up reinforcements and the stalemate at Anzio followed. Subsequently, as Secretary of War Stimson revealed at a recent press conference, the command was changed.

What happened at Anzio and the aftermath have been thoroughly studied by military leaders. They feel it was a lesson learned, particularly in relation to the big push from England. They believe that, in similar circumstances today, an Allied commander would not hesitate to exceed his authority and take advantage of the kind of opening that existed for a time at Anzio.

The important point is that the military try to learn from experience.

I WISH as much could be said for leadership on the home front. Procrastination, indifference and political maneuvering seem to be the order here in Washington. In at least two fields this can have disastrous effects for the war and the peace.

Although the first proposal for authorization of funds for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration went up to Congress in January, it was not until last Saturday that the House got around to making money available to the organization that must carry out relief in liberated areas. And then the amount was reduced by nearly half. The House approved 450 million dollars, after cutting out an additional 350 million dollars, which would have been transferred from lend-lease funds.

While Republicans voted almost solidly against the 350 million-dollar transfer, Minority Leader Joe Martin indicated there would be no objection if the Senate restored this amount. So now the Senate has a chance to make up for the error.

The essential thing is speed. Most of the other big powers have already made their share of the UNRRA fund available. The United States lags behind.

It isn't just a question of our self-respect in meeting an obligation we agreed to. Governor Lehman, the director of UNRRA, has been seriously handicapped in preparing for the task of feeding and clothing Europe's destitute.

He has been unable to take advantage of surpluses now glutting the food market. Plans and preparations have had to be conditional on when money would be in hand. This could well mean added suffering and starvation for millions of innocent victims of the war. It could mean social and political chaos in Europe.

AN ALMOST equally serious situation comes out of the delay in acting on legislation providing for the change-over of industry from war to peace. Short of a magic wand to be waved over the land, the job must be laid out and defined or we'll get confusion worse confounded here at home.

No one, least of all its authors, argues that the Baruch-Hancock plan is a blueprint for a perfect new society. The authors of that reconversion plan had their sights fixed on a fundamental objective—getting war contracts and war machinery out of the way so that peacetime production could begin.

The Senate has already adopted a measure which would carry out the basic objectives of the Baruch-Hancock plan. Sponsors of a similar proposal in the House hope for action this week or, at the latest, by the first of next week. Perfectionists, arguing for a more inclusive reconversion plan, might well, as Baruch has said, quibble us into a panic if peace should break out suddenly.

Conceivably, events could happen fast from now on out. Let's be ready. Let's not end the war with another kind of Pearl Harbor.

Committee Forecasts 2 Years Of War, Votes Army 49 Billions

The House yesterday received a $49,350,840,700 war appropriation bill designed to give a 7,700,000 man Army what it takes to follow up Monday's blow across the Channel and a Pacific push, but the House Appropriations Committee warned against overconfidence that Hitler will capitulate this year.

"There is no warrant," the committee said, "for such an assumption."

In fact, Representative J. Buell Snyder (D., Pa.), war subcommittee chairman, told newsmen he believed the only safe thing to do was to count on two more full-scale years of war, with a "hope" that Europe would be liberated before the calendar turns.

The new war bill, Snyder's report told the House, will keep the Army supplied with men and materiel "for pushing on without pause" without shortages of either, but "if the war with Germany should terminate in this calendar year a lesser amount might suffice." He announced plans for a midfiscal year recanvass of Army fiscal needs.

Seventy-four Billions This Year

The 49 billion new fiscal year Army budget contrasts with $74,211,249,961 made available to the War Department this year. Of this year's allotment, $33,672,971,000 was unused, because of "war events in our favor," Snyder said. The latter sum would be reappropriated, leaving only $15,677,869,700 in new appropriations.

Largest item in the new bill is $12,685,000,000 for pay and travel, with Army aviation a close second, at $12,610,200,000. Bulk of the latter will go for 41,345 new planes, of nearly all tactical types.

Other items—$8,599,067,600 for ordnance, with artillery and mortar ammunition underscored; $2,899,251,000 for subsistence; $1,721,600,000 for clothing and equipage; $2,540,491,075 for the Signal Corps; $2,662,212,500 for the Engineer service; $1,850,000,000 for the Transportation Corps; $800,000,100 for expediting production; $397,975,900 for special service schools and department expenses; $881,000,000 for general supplies; $493,204,520 for the medical department, and $670,000,100 for the chemical warfare service.

Great Battles Forecast

In hearings leading up to the bill, Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, deputy chief of staff, contrasted the improved position of the Allies around the globe with the uncertain situation a year ago, but told the committee:

"There is every reason to believe that the approaching period will be one of heavy fighting involving great numbers of American troops. The scale of the coming battles is expected to be beyond anything heretofore experienced by us in this war, and replacement requirements in men and materials must, of necessity, be large."

Gen. George C. Marshall, in a brief statement said that early in the year the Army was confronted with "an exceedingly serious situation" because of the lag in Selective Service goals but adjustments have been made that will enable the Army to "maintain our fighting units overseas constantly at a maximum degree of efficiency."

On May 19, Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, told the committee that as tremendous as Army air power was then "we have not as yet obtained our maximum striking power." Arnold estimated planned strength in the main will reach its peak by June 30 of this year.

Pilot Finally Finds Russia; Wants Signs

By Eddy Gilmore

A United States Airbase in the Soviet Union, June 7 (AP).—Lieut. George Meyers of Flora, Ill., and Indianapolis, put his fast single-seater down here today and asked cautiously "is this Russia?"

"Sure," said a sergeant.

"You're really sure?" pursued Meyers.

"Of course, why?"

"Well," said the 21-year-old lieutenant climbing out of the plane, "the last place I tried to put down wasn't. It turned out to be Iasi, Romania."

Meyers said that on his way to the airbase here he saw a field about 5 miles ahead of him and dropped down.

"The next thing I knew, I saw five Messerschmitts after me," he explained.

He said he eluded them, then figured they just happened to be in the vicinity, and tried again for a landing at the same field, still thinking it was a Russian base.

"This time they really let me have it—flak and everything," he said. "To what I owe my luck for getting away, I don't know—but we ought to put up signs or something—it's not easy to tell Russia from the air."

Roosevelt, Halifax Discuss Progress Of War in France

Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, came from his first liberation conference with President Roosevelt yesterday to report they had discussed "the war news which is pretty good so far."

"We must expect a tough comeback from the Germans," he continued. "But it is a great thing that we got over there."

Halifax told newsmen he had compared notes about the war with the President in a meeting which was "just a chat, quite informal."

The Ambassador said he hopes to return to England for a visit sometime this summer.

U. S. Faces Plant Reconversion Without Program, NAM Says

By Ben W. Gilbert

A charge that the Nation "faces the imminent reconversion of American industry from war to peace with neither plans nor machinery to do the job" was voiced yesterday by the National Association of Manufacturers while Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board, told the House Postwar Committee that industry must do its own postwar planning because the Government can't do it.

The current issue of the NAM News, weekly news letter issued by the cancellation by the Navy of its the industry group, asserted that contract with the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., "brought into clear focus as nothing previously had done the lack of a practical demobilization policy."

Called Shocking Realization

The developments "shocked" management, labor and official Washington into the realization that the plans did not exist, the NAM said.

"The public now realizes that the months of conversation devoted to this problem in and out of Washington had accomplished little," the NAM said.

Nelson said:

"Companies such as Brewster must depend on private ingenuity and initiative in planning their postwar program. After the war, it won't be the Government's job to find work for each company in its present expanded position. It's impossible to find a postwar market for the 8000 or 9000 airplanes we now produce monthly . . .

"We don't want to set up a WPA for small businesses," he said. "We want companies to give us their plans and policies for reconversion. I am 100 per cent in favor of helping them, but not running them."

Other developments underlined the situation:

1. Nelson, in an address to Detroit labor leaders earlier this week, pledged that the "reward for greater war production is not going to be unemployment."

"Sooner or later there may be an actual decline in war production," Nelson said. "It may come after the defeat of Germany—it may come before. The changeover machinery is ready. We are going to make the resumption of peacetime operations dovetail into the declining war economy." (This was the first hint that full-scale reconversion may not wait for the end of military operations in Europe.)

2. It was reported that Bernard M. Baruch and his associate, John Hancock, had protested to War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes against delay by the War Production Board in setting up reconversion machinery as recommended in the Baruch report. Confirmation of the report was not available.

Stop-gap Committee Set Up

3. It was indicated unofficially that WPB recently established a "staff" within the Production Executive Committee to do reconversion planning as a stop-gap action to bridge over the opening of the European liberation drive that would be satisfactory to all pending development of machinery groups in the WPB and armed services.

Cited as Example

"Aside from the reason assigned by the Navy for the cancellation, the Brewster case stands as an example of what industry may expect when military events bring on the inevitable flood of contract modifications.

"As the explosive qualities of the Brewster situation became more and more apparent in Washington, there was a flurry of action.

"One tangible result of the Brewster case may be a modification by the Army and Navy of their cancellation policies so as to give management enough advance notice to enable it to plan ahead for reconversion to some other product.

Native of Belgium Held in Failure to Register for Draft

Albert Wing, 42, a native of Belgium, of 50 T st. nw., who went to jail June 6 for 12 days for minor traffic violations, was charged with failing to register for draft yesterday, after FBI agents took him from the jail to the U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Wing, according to Metropolitan Police of the Ninth Precinct, was arrested June 3 when he backed his car into another automobile. It was found he had never applied for citizenship, and that he had no District driver's license, and no draft registration card. Immigration authorities said Wing would not be prosecuted on the alleged illegal entry into this country in 1911, due to complications of pre-1924 law.

Hughson Tames Yanks as Bosox Score, 8-1

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

For the second-division clubs, one of the nicest things about this American League pennant race is the fact that you can go up as quickly as you came down. Right now, a two-game winning streak could lift the Nats from eighth place to fourth, just to give you an idea.

POVICH

There has never been anything like it. Three different teams have been in the lead since the first week of the season. Six clubs have been in the cellar at different times. The Nats were tied for fourth place last Sunday afternoon and in undisputed possession of eighth place Sunday evening. It's giddy.

The fact is, there isn't a real good ball club in the league. We'd say eight second-division clubs are battling for the pennant. If there was a hot team in the league, it would be out in front by six games at this point. This is no time to quit on any club, bad as it might be, because it hasn't much to lick.

In the National League the picture is clear enough. The only well-balanced club in that circuit is out in front by four games. That's the St. Louis Cardinals. They would do all right in a normal year. As it is, they're a bit of a disappointment, yet they are threatening to make a runaway race of it.

The Nats wouldn't be in last place if they had retained their health. Their last Western trip was a pretty sorry one not only in point of games won and lost. The Nats were a badly-bunged up crew, with three or four regulars ailing in every game. As wise a man as Connie Mack still thinks they will win the pennant. Joe Cronin likes the Nats better than any club he has seen.

Washington's pitching is all right. The Nats' pitchers have been getting licked because their outfielders have been letting balls drop safely and throwing to the wrong bases. George Case, pained by two damaged knees, has been failing to get to balls that should have been soft catches. Pop-fly hits beat the Washington pitchers four times in the West.

What there hasn't been any excuse for, though, is the Nats' horrible attempts to get runs home after putting them on base. The Nats lead the league in team batting by a wide margin, but they don't hit in he clutches. They need a cleanup hitter in the worst way, but he isn't in sight.

This is a refreshing year in one sense. No team appears to be scared of the Yankees. There's no disguising the fact that the Yanks are operating this season with a lot of guys who couldn't buy their way into the majors in a peacetime year. Still, they're one of the better clubs in the league and could win the pennant, but if they do, well, as Jimmy Dykes says, "we ought to go hide."

The Browns and Red Sox are the club with the most good players. The Browns have the edge on pitching and reserve strength. One of the amazing men in the league this season is Mark Christman, the Browns' third baseman, who has suddenly become a swell ball player. The Red Sox could romp to the pennant with Washington's pitching.

Chicago has suddenly come up with batting power. Thurmand Tucker is hitting around .400 and so is Ed Carnett, the rookie who is shoving Hal Trosky completely out of the first base job. It's the best hitting Chicago team in years. But their infield isn't much. Detroit has pitching but is weak in the outfield. Cleveland is the slowest team in the league. The A's are in-and-outers with good pitching.

The coming of Joe Vosmik to Washington recalls that Washington fans were rooting against the fellow 9 years ago in the closing days of the season. That was 1935, when Vosmik, then with the Indians, and Buddy Myer, were battling it out for the league batting championship.

On the final day of the sesason, Vosmik led by three points, .349 to .346. He seemed to have the batting title locked up. To assure it, Manager Roger Peckinpaugh kept Vosmik out of the first game of a double-header with the Browns and thus protect his average. Washington meanwhile was playing the A's in Philadelphia.

That afternoon, Cleveland began to get reports that Myer had made three hits in his first three times at bat. Peck sent Vosmik into the last inning of the first game as a pinch hitter. He struck out. Now Myer was leading him, and Vosmik had to play the second game to regain some points if he could. But Myer made his fourth straight hit in Philadelphia. Vosmik got only one hit in four times at bat, and finished up with a .348 figure to Myer's .349. The title brought Myer a $500 cash prize from the league.

Thrown for Loss: Bertelli, Now Marine, to Wed July 8

West Springfield, Mass., June 7 (AP).—Second Lieut. Angelo Bertelli, 22, USMCR, more familiarly known as Notre Dame's football passing ace, will wed his hometown sweetheart on July 8.

Angelo Bertelli

Miss Gilda L. Passerini, also 22, filed marriage intentions today for herself and the former Notre Dame ace, who was selected as quarterback on the Associated Press All - America football team for 1943.

Currently employed at a war plant in adjoining Springfield, Miss Passerini confided to a reporter that the date had been set and that Bertelli would be home on leave at that time. He is stationed at Quantico, Va.

Bertelli was graduated from Cathedral High School in Springfield, where he was a football, baseball and hockey star, and played in every game for Notre Dame last year except the last one when he was called into the service. He had been a Marine "V-12" student at Notre Dame.

Recently, Bertelli, sometimes called "the Springfield Rifle" because of his football passing ability, was drafted by the Boston pro football Yanks.

Phils Score 2 in 9th, Top Dodgers, 6-5

Brooklyn, June 7 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies scored two runs in the ninth after two were out to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 6-5, today.

A triple by Ray Hamrick and a wild pitch enabled the Phillies to tie the score. Then Rube Melton walked Tony Lupien and Buster Adams. With Wes Flowers relieving, former Dodger Jimmy Wasdell singled tallying Lupien with the winning run.

Ken Raffensberger, who pitched the first eight frames for Philadelphia was the winner, his fifth of the cmpaign, and Rube Melton suffered his fourth reversal.

The Dodgers got off to an early lead when Frenchy Boardagaray singled to open Brooklyn's half of the first inning and was followed by Augie Galan's home run. Galan's hit gve him a string of 18 straight games in which he has hit safely.

Ott Hits Two Homers As Giants Win, 6 to 2

Polo Grounds, New York, N. Y., June 7 (AP).—Pounding Al Javery for four home runs, including Mel Ott's thirteenth and fourteenth, Nappy Reyes' fifth, and Phil Weintraub's sixth, the Giants gave Harry Feldman an easy 6-to-2 victory for his fourth triumph before 12,821 night game cash customers.

Ott's first homer came in the third, and his second in the seventh with George Hausmann on. Reyes' drive was inside the park in the sixth, and Weintraub's followed Ott's in the seventh.

Feldman had a one-hit shut out to his credit until the seventh when Butch Nieman poled his seventh homer with Tommy Holmes on base for Boston's only runs.

Phil Weintraub's 450-foot triple and Nappy Reyes single accounted for the other Giant run in the fourth.

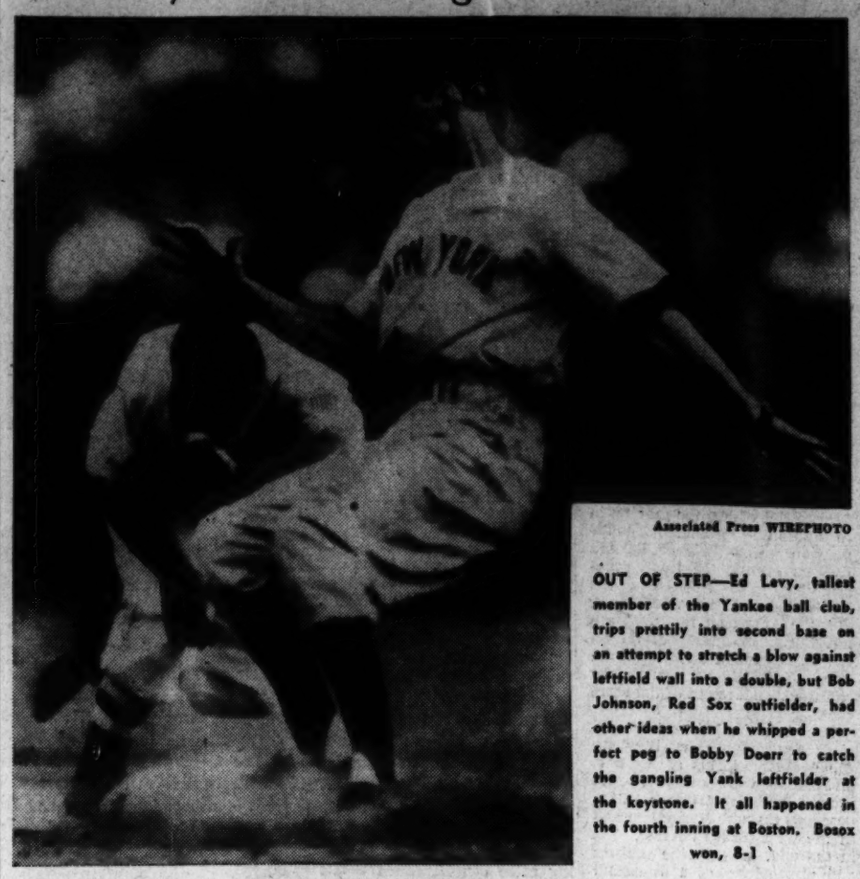
Entries for the eleventh annual Schoolboy Golf Championship, sponsored by The Washington Post in cooperation with the District Golfer's Association, will close tonight at 9 o'clock at The Post sports department.

Qualifiers will tee off at noon Friday at Manor Country Club, with the opening round scheduled for 8 o'clock the following morning. The second round will be played at 11:30 a. m. Saturday. Semifinalists will tee off at 8 o'clock Sunday morning and the winners will battle for The Post Trophy at 11:30 a. m.

Pairings will be made tonight and will appear in Thursday morning's Post. A field of more than 60 golfers is expected to compete.

A Fancy Dan Is Caught at Second Base



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

OUT OF STEP—Ed Levy, tallest member of the Yankee ball club, trips prettily into second base on an attempt to stretch a blow against leftfield wall into a double, but Bob Johnson, Red Sox outfielder, had other ideas when he whipped a perfect peg to Bobby Doerr to catch the gangling Yank leftfielder at the keystone. It all happened in the fourth inning at Boston. Bosox won, 8-1

Cronin Leads 12-Hit Attack On Borowy

Boston, June 7 (AP).—The Red Sox, behind the six-hit pitching of Tex Hughson, swamped the New York Yankees, 8-1, today in the opener of a five-game series.

While the Boston ace was holding the world champions at bay, the Red Sox fell on Hank Borowy for 9 of their 12 hits, in the 5 innings he worked, including a 5-run outburst in the fifth.

Manager Joe Cronin led his team's attack with a double and a two-run homer, the twenty-sixth round-tripper off Yankee pitching this year.

The Yankees' only run came in the seventh when Johnny Lindell tripled and scored on Don Savage's infield out. But Metheny was the only Yankee to get more than one hit, making two singles.

Rookie Al Lyons finished out the Yankees' pitching and yielded the winner's last two runs in the sixth.

The victory gave Hughson a record of seven wins and two losses, tying that of Borowy, who lost his second of the year against seven victories.

Grove Handcuffs Tigers As Chisox Triumph, 3 to 1

Chicago, June 7 (AP).—Hal Newhouser, Detroit southpaw who is the American League's winningest pitcher, failed in his quest for his season's ninth victory tonight when he walked nine White Sox batters in six innings, two of them with the bases loaded, to give the spurting Chicagoans a seventh straight victory, 3 to 1.

Orval Grove turned in his season's fifth win against four defeats and hurled shutout ball after Pinky Higgins' single followed two passes for the lone Detroit tally in the first inning.

The Sox tied it up in the third when Newhouser walked Ed Carnett, first baseman, after a pass, Thurman Tucker's single, and a fumble by Shortstop Joe Orengo filled the bases. He walked Grove in the sixth after a pass and singles by Mike Tresh and Jim Webb loaded the bases. Tresh scored the plus run a moment later on Wally Moses' long fly.

Nats, A's Open 5-Game Set, Lefebvre Gets Mound Job

The Nats moved on to Philadelphia today in an attempt to regain some statue in the American League; at least quit the embarrassing cellar position.

They open a five-game series with the Athletics at Shibe Park with a single game this afternoon, a night game tomorrow, a game on Saturday and a double-header on Sunday.

Manager Ossie Bluege today is expected to give Bill Lefebvre his second starting job of the season. Dutch Leonard's starting turn is due, but he is being saved for the night game on the theory that his knuckle ball will be more effective under the lights.

Lefebvre made only one start for the Nats in the West but he achieved one of their five victories with a clever performance against the Browns.

The three-day respite from the league's schedule is expected to aid the Nats' convalescents, Joe Kuhel, his rib muscles now less painful, is expected to return to the line-up, and George Case also welcomed the three-day rest.

Bluege has not been pleased with his third base situation. Gil Torres has been showing the strain of daily play, and Hillis Layne may get the job against right-handed pitching despite the fact he is no ground-coverer.

The Nats won three out of four games in their last series with the A's, who are now in sixth place, a full game in front of Washington. Connie Mack's pitchers for the series will be Luman Harris, Jess Flores, Russ Christopher and Buck Newsom, who will pitch one of the Sunday contests.

The release of Third Baseman Luis Suarez to the Nats' Chattanooga farm was announced yesterday. Suarez, clever-fielding Cuban rookie, was unimpressive at bat. He played in only two games.

Two Teams Tied for First In Pro-Am War Bond Event

Philadelphia, June 7 (AP).—Sergt. Vic Ghezzi, of the U. S. Army, and Fred Woodruff, of Atlantic City, N. J., tied for top honors with Walter Work, of Eaglesmere, Pa., and Dr. William Candy, of the home club, in the pro-amateur handicap division of the Philadelphia Inquirer's 17,500 war bond invitation golf tournament at the Torresdale-Frankford Country Club today.

The main 72-hole event gets under way tomorrow morning, with a field including Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Byron Nelson and Gene Sarazen.

Ghezzi and Woodruff turned in a card of 32-32—64, and Work and Dr. Candy, 28-36—64. The event was conducted on a best-ball basis, with the amateurs getting three-fourths of their club handicaps.

Behind the leaders, in another tie, were Toney Penna, of Dayton, Ohio, and B. Lehman, of Chicago, with 33-33—66, and Bud Lewis and Howard Everitt, both of the Manufacturers Club, Philadelphia, with the same card.

Next came eight teams tied at 67—Mike Turnesa, White Plains, N. Y., and J. Gilmore, of the home club; Byron Nelson, Toledo, Ohio, and Ed Lowery, San Francisco,

False Break Delays Feature At Aqueduct

New York, June 7 (U.P.).—The 24,633 racing fans at Aqueduct saw two "races" for the price of one today, when three horses broke away in the $3000 added Seaside Handicap, delaying the feature 28 minutes.

Breezing Home, owned by William Zeigler whose Bounding Home won the $50,000 added Belmont Stakes Saturday, went the full six furlongs before being returned to the starting gate and Colchis and Harvard Square stepped almost a quarter of a mile.

W-L Ranch's Bill Sickle, a four-year-old son of Sickle, captured the six furlong sprint, negotiating the distance in 1:12 1-5, after taking command in the final 60 yards. Two and a half lengths ahead of the favored Colchis at the tape, the victor with Ted Atkinson up, netted $12.50, $6.10 and $3.00.

Colchis, fifth most of the way, moved up to place a head in front of Harvard Square in a photo finish for second. Colchis paid $3.50 and $2.50 and Harvard Square yielded $2.40 for third. Fire Warden set the pace, dropping back to finish last behind Breezing Home, fifth.

The mutuel handle was $2,235,542 for the eight race card.

Neyland to Get Overseas Duty

Dallas, June 7 (AP).—Col. Robert R. Neyland, former football coach of the University of Tennessee, will leave tomorrow for overseas duty. He is the Army Southwest Division engineer attached to the Eighth Service Command. He served in France in World War I.

Commodores Top Cutters, 5-0; Take Lead

Bainbridge, Md., June 7 (AP).—Bobby Coombs, former Jersey City hurler, twirled a nifty 5-0 shutout over the Curtis Bay Cutters today and gave the Bainbridge Commodores a 5-2 edge in the service club series.

In the fastest club game yet played, the Commodores ran their string of victories to 12 straight as Coombs let the Cutters down with seven well-scattered hits.

The Commodores drew a run in the second when Bud Blattner, former Cardinal second baseman, rifled a single to center, stole second and scampered home on Bob Scheffing's liner to left.

The Bainbridge nine hit the jackpot for four runs in the third. Coombs led off the inning with a walk, went to third as Freddy Chapman singled over first and scored on Bill Barnacle's fly.

Two more walks filled the bases and Sherry Robertson blasted a hit to right to score both. While Robertson was trapped between bases, Blattner scored the fourth run.

The Commodores will meet the Holabird Signal Corps nine at Bainbridge tomorrow in an Eastern Service League game.

Police Club Nine Wins

The Police Boys Club No. 2 baseball team defeated the Navy Yard Shop No. 18, 10-4, yesterday at Rose Park Playground.

Dodgers Trade Chipman for Cubs' Stanky

Brooklyn, June 7 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers and the Chicago Cubs today completed a deal today in which the Dodgers acquired Infielder Eddie Stanky in exchange for Left-handed Pitcher Bob Chipman.

Stanky came to the Cubs from Milwaukee two years ago as a shortstop, but last season played mostly at second base. He led the American Association in batting in 1942, with a mark of .342. He is slated to report to Manager Leo Durocher tomorrow.

Chipman has a record of three games won and one lost. He won 15 and lost 7 for Montreal of the International League last year, with an earned run average of 3.08.

The Dodgers also signed Ralph Branca, 18-year-old pitcher from New York University.

Bluhm in No-Hitter As Garvin's Wins

Les Bluhm hurled no-hit, no-run ball last night as Garvin's Grill edged FBI ten, 1-0, at Ballston Stadium, in a well played softball game. The Grillmen registered only two hits off Reds Kuker, Sleuth flinger, both coming in the fourth when the only run of the game was tallied on successive doubles by Walsh and Heinbaugh. Kuker fanned 10 and Bluhm whiffed nine.

In the preliminary, Marine girl softballers defeated IBM ten, 11-1.

Ike Williams Wins Over Sam Angott

Philadelphia, June 7 (AP).—Ike Williams, a 2-to-1 favorite, won a 10-round split decision over Sammy Angott, former lightweight champion, before a crowd of 15,000 at Shibe Park tonight. Williams won on the vote of Referee Irving Kutchner after the two judges split.

Promoter Herman Taylor announced the crowd as 14,811 paid and the gross gate $46,025.

Each of the three officials saw the fight differently. Judge Frank Knaresborough gave it to Angott, six rounds to four. Judge Lou Tress called it a draw. He gave each four rounds and called two even. Kutcher gave Williams five rounds, Angott three and called two even. The Associated Press gave Angott seven rounds, Williams two and called one even.

'Wild Bill' Endicott, Auto Racer, Dies at 68

Indianapolis, June 7 (AP).—Willard Nelson (Wild Bill) Endicott, former Indianapolis Speedway race driver and later an auto racing promoter, died today at his home here. He was 68 years old.

Endicott finished fifth in the 1912 500-mile Speedway classic and retired from the track in 1915.

Jockey Root Rides Victor, Lone Winner

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., June 7.—Just as it appeared that Jockey Ralph (Buddy) Root, leading rider at the meeting, was going to be shut out for the day, the Kansas City boy found a running Bill K. under him and the combination won the seventh event, best offering on an all-claiming program, the second of the Victory meeting here.

A disqualification marked the race. G. E. Harris' Stella's Sun, which finished second, weaved all over the track while under the guidance of A. McGuinn, a green apprentice rider. The judges removed his number and in the new placing C. E. Brining's Marandan was second and A. A. Fishback's Seven Seas was third. A field of six competed, with C. P. Sowers' Oldwick, the heavily played favorite, last.

Bill K. went to the front going on the backstretch in the test over the Charles Town Course of 120 feet more than six furlongs. Root rated the son of Register off the early pace of Ashame, when Bill K took the lead and was never threatened. In the meanwhile, Stellas Sun had interfered with Seven Seas, Oldwick and other horses, according to the official ruling. The stewards, however, exonerated Apprentice McGuinn.

Bill K. paid $11.40 and was clocked in 1:16 4-5. An estimated crowd of 3000 saw the race, conducted over a fast track under bright skies.

The 2 and 7 combination proved the right one in the daily double. The $54 payoff went to those who coupled Mrs. H. F. Atwell's Morning Time, the $8.80 winner of the first race, with J. E. Crider's Worries, the $8 winner of the second.

BETWEEN RACES . . . Programs for the remainder of this week are for Army and Navy relief and West Virginia charities . . . There are no strings attached and no change in the mutuel take or the admission prices . . . A fine chance for a day at the races and a helping hand at one and the same time . . . Jockey Martin Bletsacker, injured here in a training accident, is much improved and will leave the local hospital next week . . . He plans a vacation at his Somerset (Ohio) home before returning to saddle actions . . . Mrs. Maxine Dufford, wife of Jockey Willie Dufford, under went an emergency operation at the Charles Town General Hospital . . . Brewers Beat Camp Springs, Add to Lead

The Heurich Brewers extended their winning streak to four and increased their lead in the Washington Post Industrial League to two games when they handed Camp Springs a 7-4 beating at Camp Springs yesterday.

"Reds" Giegerich, star Brewer left fielder, was the hitting star, banging out a home run, triple and single in four trips. Aside from his hitting talents, Giegerich swiped three bases, one a race to home plate.

The Brewmen pushed two runs across in the third inning and Camp Springs tied it at 2-all in the fourth. The Brewers then scored one in the fifth, two in the sixth and two in the eighth while Camp Springs tallied once in the seventh and ninth. Ray Scrivener was the winning pitcher.

By Jerry Kluttz

Bill Puts Civilian Force Of the Army at 1,215,000

The 50-billion-dollar War Department appropriation bill which was reported yesterday to the House calls for a total civilian force in this country of 1,215,000 for the coming year, of whom 33,793 would be in the departmental service here. On top of that the Department has more than 11,000 military people here and in addition several thousand others who are classified as 'field' employes. Moreover, it has at least 100,000 civilians on overseas assignments and they aren't included in the totals. The House Appropriations Committee was pleased to note that the number of civilians had been reduced by 167,887 from a high of 1,382,542. The number here was cut 5000. However, William Kushnick, personnel director, held out no hope for similar reductions this year. He expects the present strength will be maintained throughout the year.

We hear all kinds of horror stories on work in Washington, but Kushnick told the committee that turnover here was only 3 per cent a month. Outside Washington it's 5 per cent. That, in itself, shows that working conditions elsewhere are far worse than they are here. The committee also was told that 45 per cent of the civilians are now women compared to 11 per cent in 1939. That 300,000 former employes are serving in the armed forces. That 16,000 discharged veterans have been given jobs, 2000 of whom were former employes. That between 60,000 and 65,000 new people must be recruited each month to replace those who resign. That the department has 100,000 men deferred out of the total draft-age strength of 290,000 males. Of the men deferred, 23,000 are childless. That the Department will spend nearly half a billion dollars next year in overtime pay.

Kushnick told the committee that Classification Act pay scales were frequently out of line in today's market. He said that it wasn't uncommon for the department to pay an unskilled employe more than it could pay his supervisor because of the Government's complicated pay structure. Half of the Army's civilians are paid, under the Classiestion Act, rates fixed in 1923 by Congress. The other half are paid prevailing wages and their salaries are adjusted frequently to keep them in line with local conditions. Only Congress can change Classification Act salaries. Kushnick made a splendid impression on the committee. Representative Snyder, subcommittee chairman, said: "You won this committee over a year ago when you convinced all of us of your capacity to run the position you occupy. Today you have reaffirmed our judgment and we still feel that you should have the rank and title of Assistant Secretary."

William Howell will be the No. 2 personnel man at United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation. He's transferring from the Civil Service Commission, where he has been an assistant chief of the recruiting division . . . and UNRRA also has hired Red Cramer, personnel officer of the National War Labor Board, to join its personnel staff . . . Paul A. Sullivan, assistant director of ship operations at the Maritime Commission, and S. M. Darr, director of the traffic division, last night were initiated into Maritime's 25-year club. Both were written personal letters by Admiral Land . . . Harry Shhart has quit as director of information at War Shipping. Jim Kendrick is in line to succeed him . . . Aubrey Taylor has taken over the information office at Federal Works.

Monroe Johnson of the Office of Defense Transportation, will write the House and Senate Appropriation Committees to insist that "stern action" be taken to prevent Federal officials from going to conventions, particularly those conventions that are held to hear speakers from Federal agencies. The White House can be expected to follow up with a curtailment order . . . Lawrence Appley, the able executive officer of War Manpower, will return to his big job in private industry on July 1. His successor will be Charles Hay, general counsel. Hay, incidentally, runs his legal office with fewer lawyers than any big agency in Government . . . The House has refused to go along with the Senate on the plan for a census of agriculture next year. The provision in the Commerce appropriation bill is now back in conference.

And Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, the efficient chief of the Bureau of Standards, will be with us for at least another year. He reached 70 a few weeks ago and he was up for retirement, but the President has approved his remaining in the service . . . Mechanics in the surface division of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing start a three-day enforced lay-off today. Lack of work is the official reason. However, the office late yesterday rescinded its order that would furlough the girls and helpers. This means that the mechanics won't be able to work Saturday, the day for which they're paid time and a half.

City News in Brief

More Salvage Contributions In District Urged by Leader

"Now, more than ever, we must renew our solemn pledge to carry on the "Salvage for Victory Program" as long as our Government sees fit to appeal to the 'Army on the Home Front,'" Chairman James E. Colliflower of the District Salvage Committee stated in an appeal to local citizens yesterday.

"We must make it a part of our daily contribution to our gallant fighting men by saving these highly essential materials," he said.

He urged Washingtonians to maintain regular contributions "which made our war production effort possible."

Household fats, rags, prepared tin cans, and scrap metal all are needed, he said.

Church Notes

Harold Hegstrom, superintendent of the National Training School for Boys, will address the monthly luncheon of the Lutheran Laymen's Fellowship today at the New Ebbitt Hotel on "What We Owe the Boy Today." . . . Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) will inaugurate Young People's Fellowship week at the Luther Place Church tonight at 8 o'clock.

Paper Loss Cited

District salvage collectors are losing about a million pounds of paper a month because apartment dwellers don't want to be bothered saving it under the kitchen table, Executive Secretary Horace Walker of the District Salvage Committee revealed yesterday.

He said monthly collections here now total about 13½ million pounds, but that an average of about 7 pounds per dwelling was not being secured because apartment dwellers refused to be inconvenienced and managers refused to provide space in the basements or lobbies where stacks could be placed pending monthly door-to-door collections.

Things to Come

Dean Emeritus Grace Hays Riley will entertain June graduates of the Washington College of Law tomorrow night at 1738 N st. nw. . . . Service men and women will discuss art and the armed forces tonight at an informal round-table of the USO at the YMCA, 18th and G sts. nw. C. Powell Minnigerode director of the Corcoran Art Galleries, will lead the discussion. . . . The "Stars Under the Stars" show at the Watergate Friday night, featuring Pearl Primus, the "dance sensation of the year"; Richard Dyer-Bennet, young English balladist, and leading jazz musicians, announced yesterday it had set aside a block of reserve seats for wounded servicemen. . . . Peter Pan, the Magic Man, will help the Children's Museum, 4215 Massachusetts ave. nw., celebrate its third anniversary Saturday with a magic show for youngsters.

Slum Hearing Today

Representative Frederick C. Smith (R., Ohio) will appear before the House subcommittee on slum clearance at 10 a. m. today and is expected to speak in behalf of private builders.

Chairman Dan McGehee (D., Miss.) said yesterday that further figures on construction and operating costs of the National Capital Housing Authority will be presented by an NCHA representative today.

Rat Survey

A rat survey was begun yesterday by members of the Parent-Teacher Association at Gage School, 2d and U sts. nw., as part of the Health Department's drive to rid the city of rodents.

Gage pupils and their parents are checking the neighborhood for rat harborages, and on the disposition of garbage and other rat food. Neither the children nor adults will carry on extermination work, A. P. Bell, District Rodent Control Officer, said yesterday. His squad of rat eradicators will exterminate as many rats as possible following the neighborhood survey.

Court Report

Virginia W. Hazen, 30, Negro, 305 9th st. nw., was sentenced yesterday to from 5 to 20 years for the second degree murder of her husband, Antonio, last Christmas Day . . . Park Policeman James J. Lyons filed a $10,000 damage suit in District Court yesterday against Francis L. Talbott, 4502 South Dakota ave., for injuries he received when, he alleges, he was knocked from his motorcycle by Talbott's car last New Years Eve.

Reconversion Costs

Cost accounting problems relating to war contract termination settlements and reconversion costs will be discussed by the local chapter of the National Association of Cost Accountants during the current year, John J. C. MacDonough, newly elected president announced last night, following a meeting of officers and directors at the new Ebbit Hotel.

Commencement

Commencement exercises of St. John's College High School will be held at 8 p. m. tonight in Memorial Continental Hall.

The Rev. Brother G. Paul, F.S.C, provincial of the Baltimore District, will preside, and John Dilton Fitzgerald, '14, will address the graduates. Brother E. Leonard, F.S.C., president of St. John's, will make the awards. Capt. Michael J. Quirk, '38, District ace now on leave, will be a guest of honor.

Girl Missing for Week

Miss Evelyn Virginia Patterson, 16, of 5907 7th st. nw., has been missing from her home since last Wednesday, her father, C. E. Patterson, reported yesterday.

PATTERSON

The father said he was anxious to have the girl return home and he wished to assure her there would be no criticism of her action.

She was born in Birmingham, Ala., and has relatives there. Her mother died nine years ago. She has blue eyes and reddish brown hair with a natural wave. At the time she left home she was carrying a small zipper bag and is thought to have been wearing a tan and gray suit and tan shoes. Her father believes she might have gone to Baltimore to seek employment.

Court Reverses Claim

Samuel J. Shepherd, 1448 Girard st. nw., a member of the Group Health Association, was ordered yesterday by the Municipal Court of Appeals to pay the association $75 to cover the claim of a surgeon, or have a previously won case in which his claim for $587 against the association was allowed by a lower court retried.

The court held that the association was correct in refusing to pay the claim on the grounds that Shepherd was being treated for the ailment at the time of his admission to the association.

District Bills Approved

Two District bills were approved yesterday by the Senate and will go to the White House for the President's signature.

One measure, designed to aid the District in obtaining Federal Social Security funds to help dependent children, would enlarge home care activities handled by the Board of Public Welfare.

The other bill authorizes a minor change in advertising requested by the Minimum Wage Board.

National U. Graduates

Justice Matthew F. McGuire of District Court will deliver the commencement address tonight before the 75th graduating class of National University. Chancellor G. P. Barse will preside, and Miss Noreen Mathews of North Dakota will deliver the first valedictory address by a woman in the University's history.

Restaurant Fined

Fourteen violations of health regulations found at Wimpy's Restaurant, 1220 7th st. nw., cost the proprietor, Alexander Economon, fines totaling $75, imposed by Municipal Court Judge Aubrey B. Fennell yesterday. David Kaufman, operator of a delicatessen at 5948 Georgia ave. nw., forfeited $50 for 10 health violations, and John Kostas and his nephew, John Costas, forfeited another $50 for

Five Dead In Traffic Accidents

D. C. Traffic deaths this year 45
Deaths this date last year.... 36
Total deaths last year..... 97

Four persons were killed in the metropolitan area, two of them in Washington, in traffic accidents yesterday, while a fifth died of previous injuries.

Oscar F. Adams, 1412 17th st. nw., and Hubert Leaman, of Gambrills, Md., passengers in the car, were killed when their car crashed into the rear of a parked truck in the 6300 block of Cental ave., Seat Pleasant, Md., about 11:30 last night.

Also in the car were Clifton Cofiin, 31, of Camp Peary, Va., a Seabee, who suffered head injuries, and Stanley V. Dove, 28, of 306 S st. ne., who suffered a cerebral concussion. Cofiin was taken to the Naval Hospital at Bethesda and Dove to Casualty Hospital.

The bodies of the dead men were taken to Ritchie funeral home, Marlboro.

Genevieve Hewins, 2, Negro, of 1843 Frederick pl. se., was killed instantly when she was struck by a bus at 20th st. and Alabama ave. se. late in the afternoon.

Driver of the bus was Carper Fender of 219 West Cameron rd., Falls Church, Va. The Capital Transit Co. reported he had been driving for the past eight years.

Mrs. Clara Proctor, 58, Negro, of 1035 15th st. ne., died earlier in the day at Gallinger Hospital of injuries received May 28, when an automobile collided with a taxicab at 5th and L sts. ne. She had refused treatment at the time of the accident, police said, but was admitted to Gallinger Hospital Monday with possible internal injuries after she had gone to a private doctor for treatment.

The driver of the car in which she was riding was Dennis Williams, 46, Negro, of 1715 U st. nw., police said, and the operator of the taxicab was Arthur F. Brommer of 1508 Olive st. ne.

John Wagner, 74, of 4907 41st st. nw., was injured fatally about 2 a. m. yesterday when he was struck by a streetcar at 7th and S sts. nw. He died at Garfield Hospital less than one half hour after the accident.

Police said the streetcar was operated by Avery H. Stephenson, 25, of 945 Longfellow st. nw.

Drivers of all four of the vehicles involved in the accidents were ordered held for action of the coroner, police said.

Ideal Father Letters Start In Big Volume

With the search for the ideal father in the Washington area only two days old, letters nevertheless already are rolling in voluminously from sons and daughters and wives who want to make Father's Day on June 18 a memorable Sunday for their own candidate.

Several of the daddies described are overseas now—one in New Guinea, another in Australia, still another "somewhere in England" and perhaps somewhere in France by this time.

Another is "just a poor, overworked Government employe who is trying his best to help win the war over in the Pentagon." But, says the young man, aged 9, who penned the letter, thiks dad still has time to take a little boy to the movies or walking in the park or to help him to make model airplanes on rainy Sundays.

The Post wants to hear about your own pop, whether he is in Washington or overseas. Write your reasons for choosing him as the best dad in the world to the Ideal Father Contest, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. The winner will be announced in plenty of time for the great day.

10 more violations found by inspectors at "John's Grill," 1228 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Mother

A 33-year-old mother was being held for the district attorney last night by police who alleged she had connived with her two sons, 12 and 10 years of age, to commit burglary.

The woman is reported to be a waitress and to have been in the District, with her sons, only about two months.

The boys are charged with burglary, police said. They are held at the Receiving Home.

When the police went to arrest the boys, they said, they found $100 which the children are believed to have stolen. It was then police became suspicious of the mother and took her into custody.

Postwar Planning

Mrs. Florence Kerr, director of War Public Services of the Federal Works Agency, last night urged postwar planning in public services as well as public works to help disorganized communities and provide employment for women and white collar men workers. She addressed the Business and Professional Women's Club at the 17th and K sts. YWCA.

Friars Receive Clothing for Italians

AID DEPOT—At Catholic University gym—depot for the local clothing campaign for Italy, sponsored by the National Catholic Welfare Conference War Relief Committee—Friars yesterday unloaded a truck-load of clothes for use by the liberated Italian people. Helping are Brothers Charles, Ronald and Emmanuel of the Friars of the Atonement, in robes. On the other side of the vehicle are Brothers Bertrand Ryan, O. P., and Francis Conway, O. P., two students of the Dominican House of Studies, clad in working clothes. Others are the Rev. C. I. Cappellino (wearing straw hat), a Dominican teacher, and Dr. Peter F. Florey, general chairman of the drive.

The drive will last two weeks with Holy Rosary Church 3d and F sts. nw., as headquarters

Suspended Instructor Assigned Work

The Board of Education yesterday voted to assign Maj. Allan C. Smith, 60-year-old suspended physical education instructor who is reported to have called District high school cadets "dumb," to administrative work pending the termination of his temporary appointment June 30.

Superintendent of School Robert L. Haycock said last night that "nothing has been discussed" relative to his reappointment.

The nature of Major Smith's duties until June 30 have not yet been worked out, J. Dallas Shirley, head of the physical training department, said after the meeting last night.

At the same time the board voted not to change the cadet program, which Major Smith had professed an interest in directing, and decided to investigate possibilities of using "young" returning veterans as instructors in military training instead of drawing on teacher volunteers whose training in many cases is sketchy.

Assistant Superintendent of Schools Chester W. Holmes said two instructors had asked to be relieved of their cadet assignments, and he had no way to replace them.

Two cadets, Lieut. Col. James Minnicks of Western and Pvt. David Ellis of Central yesterday told the board they would "hate to see any changes" in the cadet program.

The board yesterday voted to increase summer school teacher and principal salaries 50 cents a day and school census employes' pay $1 a day.

A request by the Navy to move old Patterson School to the Bellevue housing project, and to staff it with teachers and custodians for use of Navy children living there was disapproved.

Senate Group Favors Reilly For PUC Post

Appointment of James F. Reilly, 36, local attorney, as a member of the Public Utilities Commission, was recommended yesterday by the Senate District Committee and probably will be brought up for Senate confirmation today.

Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Miss.), chairman of the District Committee, yesterday asked the Senate's unanimous approval of Reilly's appointment, but Senator Wallace H. White, jr. (R., Me.), minority floor leader, questioned "the persuasive reason" for rushing the action rather than following normal procedure.

Reilly will succeed Gregory Hankin, whose term expires July 1.

Among witnesses at yesterday's District Committee meeting were: John A. Savage of the Consumers Organizing Committee; Mrs. Myrtle De Montis, American Equity Association, and Maurice A. Gersing, Columbia Improvement Association.

Employers Differ on Effects In District of New WMC Rules

The new War Manpower hiring controls which go into effect here July 1 are expected to stabilize Washington's erratic labor market by some but by others it is feared they may "restrict" the more immediate solutions to employ shortages which can be gained from "on the spot" hiring.

Hotels, restaurants and laundries, are among those awaiting with some trepidation the priority ratings for local businesses which will be drawn up by the Washington area priority committee when it meets next week, managers said.

On the basis of these lists, available labor, both men and women will be referred to job vacancies—the first referrals going to those businesses or industries rated highest in terms of importance to Washington as a war center.

"As things have been," E. F. Wesley, president of the Laundry and Dry Cleaners Association, said yesterday "individual laundries were able to hire new help from day to day, just so long as applicants had proper statements of availability.

"In this business," he pointed out, "it isn't always possible to wait on Monday for applicants to be sent around by the U. S. Employment Office on Friday.

"And if the Priority Committee should place laundries and dry cleaning businesses far down on the priority list, we'd be out on a limb.

"However," Wesley added, "we won't really know how the new program affects us until after the committee meets and tells us how large and how important our worker supply is. It should be right near the top."

Other types of businesses, like the retail food trades, however, expect a new lease on life.

According to Aaron Levine, executive secretary for the Independent Food Distributors Association, the WMC program gives grocery stores, for instance, a "real place" as a needed industry in the community. This, he feels, will reduce employe turnover materially, as clerks of draft age will be satisfied that they are critical jobs and less inclined to change employment.

Women Promise New Record In Fifth War Loan Campaign

The thousand District women who have volunteered for bond booths in banks, stores and theaters, inspired by the landings in France, will set new records for bond sales during the Fifth War Loan Drive, according to Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, chairman of the Women's Division of the District War Finance Committee.

Mrs. Nichols who spoke yesterday before a luncheon meeting of 200 women representing 87 local women's clubs and groups urged that organizations call special meetings if necessary to assure their full participation in the drive. For the first time, she said, women volunteers will take the place of bank tellers in selling bonds and recording the sales.

Mrs. Earl O. Horner, regional adviser for the War Finance Division of the Treasury, who also spoke, called for sacrificial giving of time and effort in order that national bond quotas might be met.

"It is imperative," she said, "that women who manage family spending invest in bonds and not in luxury goods. It costs 275 million dollars a day to finance the war and that does not include the toil and tears that must be spent to win the war and the broken homes and suffering that will result.

"We each of us must search our own conscience and determine how much energy we have to give to this job, nor forgetting that our fighting men do not stop when the thermometer soars or when they are tired. They go on and take the next hill or they go out on the next mission. The Fifth War Loan goal is our mission."

Landing Craft Carries Troops At Pentagon to Bolling Field

A distinct invasion-coast flavor is given to operations at Fort Pentagon by dawn and dusk appearances of landing craft to transport Army personnel back and forth between the biggest foxhole in the world and Bolling Field.

These water-borne troops travel directly from the front porch of the Pentagon, across the little inlet at the river entrance, and so on, merrily down the Potomac to the landing docks at Bolling Field. It requires 30 minutes, with two journeys in the morning and two in the evening.

The boat itself is a double-ended barge which would not look out of place in a newsreel of invasion movements. A medium blue, it began life as a Navy craft, is about 25 feet long and carries 55 men. Acquired from the Navy, it is operated by an Army enlisted man.

Passengers, making occasional comments about drawing overseas pay, enjoy the trip even though they are required to stand; there are no seats. Mostly they lean against the waist-high gunnels and watch the scenery go by. The boat is far superior to a bus, they assert, and twice as smooth.

Without aspirations to brave the elements unnecessarily, the troops do not use the boat when whitecaps dance on the Potomac, or when there is dirty weather afoot. On such occasions a bus calls for them. Either way, the riders have to stand, but they regard the sea trip as more relaxing after a tough day in the Pentagon.

Sometimes hardbitten fighting men in battle dress, visible on the tops of half-tracks or covered jeeps on trains crossing the river, spy their brothers at arms in the boat below and wave vigorously, full of sprit de corps. The brothers in question, a little impressed at the sight of heavy armament and the like probably en route overseas, always wave back.

Rabbis Report Theft

Two Cleveland, Ohio, Rabbis, Boruch Sorotkin and Wolf Dessler, reported to police that clothing they had left in a parked car at 7th and N sts. nw. was stolen yesterday. Both men are attached to the Jewish Theological Seminary in Cleveland.

Navy in D. C. Sends 69 Men To Services

The march of young Navy Yard employes to the armed services is continuing, it was revealed yesterday by the D. C. Selective Service Board of Appeals for the week ending May 13.

Of a total of 74 appeals for 2-B classification denied by the board in that week, 57 were Navy Yard employes under 26. Eleven were Naval Research Laboratory physicists, engineers and chemists, one an engineering draftsman in the Navy Department and one a 23-year-old meteorologist with the Weather Bureau who had a Government request for deferment.

There is a chance that some of the Navy Yard's young and highly skilled men will yet get deferment under special requests.

Not So Hopeful

No such hope can be seen in the case of young Police and Fire Department employes. Fifteen Metropolitan Police privates and four Fire Department privates were among 60 men denied 2-A classification by the board. All but four of the policemen were under 26 and all of the firemen were under that age. So far, they have received no recommendation for deferment from the Puryear Government Deferment Committee.

The Appeal Board also granted 50 appeals from Class 1-A to Class 2-A. Included in this group were 14 Capital Transit Co. employes. Nineteen men were placed in 2-B.

A large percentage of those obtaining deferments will have to appear before the board again, if they are to retain deferred classifications. Many of their deferments granted for six-month basis, will expire in a month or two.

The deferment of Harold A. Rohlfsen, a 32-year-old streetcar operator, dates from January 29 and that of Edgar Vernon Cooper, 29, a milk route deliveryman, from December 16. In such cases, the board said, it grants deferments from the original date requested even though the cases are not sent to them until the men have passed their preinduction examinations.

Others Granted Deferments

Others granted deferred classifications were Lloyd H. Norman, reporter for the Washington Bureau of the Chicago Tribune, and John LeRoy Cutter, chief of the United Press Senate correspondents.

The board granted two appeals from 1-A (L) to 2-B and two from 1-A to 2-D.

Among 60 persons denied 2-A appeals were Benjamin Love Storey, 28-year-old cost accountant with the OPA, Joseph V. Fitzpatrick, 25-year-old private in the National Park Service, and Claude E. Purvis, jr., 32, assistant to the director of the American Red Cross.

In addition, the board denied 15 appeals to 3-D and 1 to 2-A from 1-A (L).

In review of out-of-town occupational deferments, the board affirmed 29 2-A and 9 2-B classifications and reversed 6 2-A and 7 2-B classifications.

D. C. Plans Cut Of $45,500 in Defense Costs

Action was taken yesterday by the District Commissioners to reduce expenses of the Civilian Defense protective services from $120,000 to $75,500 per year.

Retrenchment approved by the Commissioners includes dismissal of five employes, including Harry N. Stull, now executive assistant of the warden service, and formerly thrice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; and elimination of seven control centers. A command center will be established with an additional emergency center at fire alarm headquarters.

Ten thousand dollars a year will be saved by turning over to the Police Department maintenance of scout cars bought with Blackout Act funds. The cars have already been turned over to the police.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District OCD director, said that, under these changes "we will maintain our complete air raid warning system, and the personnel necessary for its operation." Chief air raid warden's headquarters will be moved to Whitehurst's office in the District Building. No objection to the curtailment has been voiced by the Army, Whitehurst added.

These savings were required to bring OCD expenditures in line with funds approved by the House. The 1945 District Budget requested $120,000 for OCD services. This was cut in the House to $100,000. A few days ago the Commissioners asked the Senate subcommittee now considering the District Appropriation bill to authorize expenditure of $25,000 for Community War Services from this fund.

"Meet Your Carrier"

Introducing readers to the boys who deliver The Post to their doorsteps every morning.

Larry Brassor, 4608 Nottingham dr., Chevy Chase, Md., is the son of Francis Brassor, chief of the administrative services for the Civil Service Commission. Larry attends Our Lady of Lourdes School and maintains a B plus average in his school work. His favorite sport is baseball and he plays on one of the school's teams. His favorite indoor sport is reading. His branch manager says that Larry is a very conscientious carrier and has done a remarkable job on his route.

Nazi Prisoner Sketches Photo Of D.C. Woman

Miss Florence Landers, manager of a restaurant here, now has a portrait of herself painted by a Nazi war prisoner in Italy. This is how it came about:

Miss Landers sent a photo of herself to a former counterman, Staff Sergeant Juan Granados, in Italy. A prisoner asked to draw a sketch from it, and the sergeant then sent it to his former boss, with a photo of him posed with the sketch.

Sergeant Granados' sister is Miss Mercedes Granados, assistant manager of a downtown restaurant, who lives at 5405 Riverdale rd., Riverdale, Md.

Bill Provides $5, $10 Pay Raises For Infantrymen

Speedily heeding a request by Secretary of War Stimson, Chairman May (D., Ky.) of the House Military Affairs Committee yesterday introduced a bill to increase pay of skilled infantrymen $5 to $10 a month.

Only a few hours before Stimson had asked for the legislation, saying infantry casualties are the highest of any branch of service. In the North African campaign, including fighting in Italy, the infantry suffered 70 per cent of the casualties, although comprising only 19.6 per cent of the total forces, Stimson said.

Estimated cost of the proposed salary boost is 55 to 75 million dollars yearly. Doughboys holding the expert infantryman's badge would get a $5 increase and those having the combat infantryman's badge, $10.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Versatile Cottage Cheese Is Nourishing

Snow-white cottage cheese is back in the market. This is good news to those who know its true worth. This food has been a household staple since pioneer days. "Smierkase," as it was called by the Pennsylvania Dutch, came by its name because it was "spreadable."

Martha Ellyn

In early days when cream and milk were plentiful, the Dutch placed the sieved smierkase in a bowl, poured cream on it and worked it to apple butter consistency with the back of a spoon. Salt and pepper were then added and it was spread on buttered bread.

Cottage cheese may have many delicious destinies. And rightly it should find its way to the table in many forms. It is high on the list of important foods. It merits this placement because, as a concentrated form of milk, it contains protein, calcium, phosphorus, iron and vitamins. Cheese has high vitamin A content, which is too often lacking in diets.

Some cooks let cottage cheese get no further than to accompany a slice of pineapple on lettuce for a salad. Such combination has its merits, but for for variety, use cottage cheese to stuff tomatoes. Pep up the cheese with chopped chives or any desired seasoning. A molded cottage cheese salad is a fine summer dish. It is the kind you can make in the morning and have ready to take from the refrigerator at the dinner hour. The recipe follows:

. COTTAGE CHEESE DOES IT—for it can be made into souffle, croquettes, fondue, loafs, salad dressing, sandwiches, cake and salad. This cottage cheese mold, center-filled with fresh fruit is as delicious as it is wholesome

MOLDED COTTAGE CHEESE

Soak 1 tablespoon gelatine in ¼ cup cold water. Dissolve it by placing it over hot water. Beat until smooth, 2 cups cottage cheese, ¾ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon paprika, ½ cup cream, 12 stuffed, chopped olives, ¼ cup chopped nutmeats. Add the cooled gelatine. Pour cheese mixture into a wet border mold and chill until set. Unmold on salad greens. Fill center with fresh fruit or vegetable salad. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

A fluffy cottage cheese omelet may be served in place of a meat dish. The following recipe will serve six persons.

COTTAGE CHEESE OMELET

Beat 4 eggs yolks until thick and light. Add ½ teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, ¼ cup milk and 1 cup cottage cheese. Add 2 tablespoons finely chopped pimineto if desired. Fold in 4 stiffly beaten egg whites. Melt 1 tablespoon butter or margarine in frying or omelet pan. Turn in the omelet mixture and cook over low heat for 3 to 5 minutes, or until omelet puffs up and is browned on bottom. Test by raising edge of omelet with spatula. Place in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 10 to 15 minutes, or until top springs back when pressed with finger. Cut about 1 inch incisions at opposite sides and crease down through center in line with cuts; then fold carefully on crease by slipping spatula under half of omelet to fold over. Slip on to hot platter and garnish with parsley. If omelet pan is used, merely fold over; omelet will shrink slightly when removed from pan. Serve at once.

Hostesses who want appetizing food to accompany drinks, will find that a bowl of cold cottage cheese made zippy with chopped chives, is fine for dunking crisp potato chips.

Traveling With a Baby Today Takes Planning of a Maneuver

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

When a mother must travel with children today she cannot depend upon a wealth of hands eager to relieve her of her burdens. She is virtually on her own. She must count upon carrying her own luggage, bringing her food with her—unless she dare take a chance upon getting into the diner—and finding trains crowded.

If she has a baby with her then everything from food to water must be brought with her. There must be ample changes of clothes as dressing-room space for washing diapers is at a premium. In packing her bags it is sensible to keep all the infant's clothes and food supplies conveniently at hand in one bag.

Don't Go On Weekends

Plan any trip with children for the middle not the ends of the week as travel over the weekends is heaviest. If first class accommodations are available get them well in advance of the date of departure and make use of roomettes, bedrooms, compartments and drawing rooms. These offer privacy—such a dear privilege in a crowded train—and bathroom facilities and when there is a baby or several small children, these accommodations may be no more expensive than several berths.

Give Child Exercise at Stops

When the train stops for any length of time at a station, take the trouble to let them run up and down the platform wildly and get some of this sitting-still nervousness out of their systems.

Children who have been on trains infrequently do not know what behavior is expected of them and it is the parental duty to lay down the law before the journey is embarked upon. The facilities of the train are free but running up and down the aisles, causing useless commotion and annoying other travelers is strictly taboo.

Our new leaflet, "Traveling With Children," offers specific information on what supplies may be needed. It may be had by sending your request for it, together with a 3-cent stamped, self-eddressed envelope, to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of The Washington Post.

Postwar U. S. Is Subject Of Symposium

Seven specialists in their respective fields contributed a well-rounded symposium as guest speakers before the D. C. Business and Professional Women's club last night. Each talked briefly on different phases of readjustment in the postwar United States and on how our country can withstand shock of military and industrial demobilization.

Occasion was the past presidents' dinner meeting, under auspices of a planning committee consisting of Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, chairman of program, and two past presidents, Mrs. Ruth Robinson Roach, Kansas City, and Miss Nina Kinsella.

Women's Part Discussed

Problems of women's employment and part in the postwar world was discussed by Mrs. May Thompson Evans, War Manpower Commission. Judge Lucy S. Howorth, Veterans' Administration, spoke on plans being formulated to help veterans adjust to peacetime economy. Public works as a vital contribution to our national stability was the subject of Florence S. Kerr, Federal Works Agency.

Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, Civil Service Commission, told of the forward-looking plans of the Civil Service when our boys come home. That social security must and will hold a key position in our national economy was a point made by Miss Lavinia Engle, regional director of the Social Security Board.

Benefit Party Set Tomorrow

Women's Republican Club of Montgomery County will hold its first party for the community tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Women's Club of Bethesda.

A benefit for the newly opened Bethesda Hospital, it will include a reception for new members, bridge, entertainment and prizes.

Mrs. Randolph G. Bishop, vice chairman of the Republican Club, is chairman, assisted by Mrs. David Baldwin, reception; Mrs. F. S. McFarlane, tickets; Miss Jean Benton, refreshments; Mrs. Leslie Arries, decorations; Mrs. Arthur Hilland, arrangements; Mrs. Frederick L. Grant, door prizes; Mrs. J. Frederick Burns, announcements.

Tickets may be secured tomorrow from Mrs. Bishop or any club member, after which they may be purchased at the door.

Frenches, Friendly Rivals In Red Cross Activities

By Genevieve Reynolds

When moms boast "I rolled 100 or so bandages today," pops can add proudly, "I did too." At least that's the way it is in the Rainsford French family.

While Mrs. French works diligently in the Woman's Surgical Dressing unit, Mr. French is supervising the little-known Men's Surgical Dressing Unit of the Red Cross. Daughter Flora Joy French has just earned her badge for work with the Junior Red Cross.

Perhaps the three sons in the service spur the French family to all-out war activities. One thing is sure they—the three members here—don't frit away any time.

No Woman's Monopoly

Most people think the Surgical Dressing Unit is a woman's monopoly. Not so! Under Mr. French's supervision, 30 to 50 Washington men—many of them servicemen—spend each Monday and Wednesday night making dressings from the great stores of gauze at Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts ave. Recently, these men celebrated the first anniversary of their unit, and the ladies made the cake of course.

In addition to his work with the surgical dressing unit, Mr. French is one of Washington's most regular blood donors. His recent thirteenth donation ends his service there. He deeply regrets that his sixtieth birthday comes before he can give his fourteenth donation. Sixty is the age limit at the Blood Donor Center.

A Specialized Mechanic

A specialized mechanic in the experimental department of the Engineering & Research Corp. at Riverdale, Mr. French is dubbed by his foreman "an extremely valuable man to his company." Now, he is working on the Ercoupe, one of the first spin-proof planes in the United States. At his factory he does double duty. Constituting himself a one-man blood donor recruiting agency, he uses his own car to transport new recruits from the factory to the center.

The two sons overseas and the other one in the USA service must be happy about dad's all-out support, about the whole French family, in fact.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Pledge to the Liberators

TO THE MEN on the beachheads, the landing barges, the transports, the bombers; to the paratroopers, the infantrymen, the sailors, the airmen; to all those who are bloodily breasting their way across the English Channel, on to the coast of Normandy, into the fortress of Europe:

We, the women at home, will seek in these crucial, epochal days to rise to the greatness demanded of us. We will stand strong behind you, not only in deed, but in spirit.

We will perform with more thoroughness and steadfastness than ever before our little jobs in factory, war plant, store, office or home.

But we will do more—we will try to rise in soul to the gallantry, courage and devotion you are manifesting. We will, for these critical days at least, put aside our petty selfishness, our vanity, our concern with triviality.

WE WILL REALIZE that this is no time for revelry, or even idle partying—unless we wish to appear in the roles of rioters at a wake; but rather that it is a time of high solemnity, an exalted time, a time of prayer and dedication.

We will realize that it is not a time for small bickering with one another, in the family, the office, the club, the neighborhood; that it is not a time for reviling of enemies, or political opponents, or Congressmen, or public officials, or business rivals, or groups or classes or races, or any other Americans, but that it is a time when all of us should unify our spirits and speak softly to each other.

We will recognize that it is a time to show that we, as yet relatively untouched by the privations of war, can take a gigantic battle with as much iron in our souls as the heroic women of Russia, China, England, France, whose homes have been the targets of bombs, the sites of battles.

We will make it a time of personal dignity one in which we will walk enveloped in the majesty of spirit that sacrifice and death bring to all human beings.

We will organize our lives so that first things come first, and so that small demanding trifles do not steal from us the time we should give to reinforcing you in thought and prayer.

WE WILL READ our newspapers, listen at our radios, not in the spirit of spectators at a ball game, not speaking of how "they" are fighting or how "they" are advancing, but rather as how "we" are pushing onward in this great battle of liberation.

We will be especially attentive to those you have left behind you over here all the mothers, wives sweethearts, sisters, who so recently have had fighting men" somewhere in England," and whose hearts at this time must be laden with anxiety and suspense.

We will take this occasion to perform some special service for the Nation—the buying of a bond, the giving of blood, the volunteering of war or community service, the joining of the Waves or the Wacs, the writing of a letter to a congressman regarding some legislation, the attending of a congressional hearing, the participation in some civic enterprise, if nothing more, the informing of ourselves on the political issues of the day so that instead of sitting home as idle parasites while you fight and die for us, we also will be expending ourselves to our fullest strength.

We will remember this is the climax of one of the great epic dramas of mankind, one in which the least expected of us is that we be noble rather than puny spectators.

We will humbly realize that this is our time of opportunity, our privileged time to share in a small way the great sacrifice, the great adventure of the greatest crusade in history, a time to know with you the exaltation of giving to something greater than ourselves.

Kings Take Wedding Trip In the North

Cadet Chapel in West Point, N. Y., was the scene of the wedding yesterday afternoon of Miss Marie Winifred Harwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Harwood of Elkins, W. Va., and Washington, to Lieut. John Creighton King, AAF, son of former Senator and Mrs. William H. King of Washington. Chaplain John D. Walthrop officiated.

Mrs. King wore ivory summer satin with tight bodice, long sleeves and full skirt ending in long train. Herveil of ivory net extended to her waist and was held in place with a Juliet cap. She carried white roses centered with a white orchid. Her father gave her in marriage.

Miss Judith Harwood, wearing pale pink marquisette and carrying a nosegay of delphinium and roses, was maid of honor for her sister.

Miss Martha Martin, Miss Marie Buscher, Miss Jane Kilduff and Miss Martha Barrett Williams were bridesmaids. Lieut. Lloyd Barrett, jr., was best man. Ushers were Lieut. Roger Hendrick, Lieut. De Rosey, C. Cabell and Lieut. Henry P. Hutchinski. After a reception at the Thayer Hotel, the couple left for a wedding trip in the North. They will make their home at Lockburne (Ohio) Army Base.

Miss Walker Is Wed

Miss Margaret Belle Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall M. Walker, became the bride of Frank Taliaferro Hoadley, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, last evening in Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church The Rev. Dr. Edward G. Latch officiated.

Wearing ivory satin with sweetheart neckline, long sleeves and finger-tip tulle veil, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She carried a bouquet of white roses. Mrs. Frank Jackson Bryce of Frederick, Md., was matron of honor. Her gown was of rose lace and tulle and she carried summer flowers.

Mrs. Worthington Bowie Houghton, Mrs. Craig Woodward, Miss Margaret Wells and Miss Margaret Woods were bridesmaids. Lieutenant Worthington Bowie Houghton, USNR, was best man. Milton M. Walker, Fred Taliaferro Graff, Lieut. Edward Johnson, USNR, the Rev. Raymond Wren, and Herwil Bryant were ushers. A reception followed.

Miss Chandler to Marry, But Career Won't Stop

Pretty Mimi Chandler, daughter ter of Senator and Mrs. A. B. Chandler, who is carving a career for herself in Hollywood, is going to be married. But, she declares emphatically, she's going to continue her screen work.

Her fiance is Maj. James Cabell, Tuscaloosa, Ala., cousin of James Branch Cabell, the author. Major Cabell is stationed at Palm Springs, Calif., with the Army Air Forces Ferrying Command and expects soon to go overseas.

Plans for the wedding, to take place next week, will wait until Mrs. Chandler, now in Kentucky, arrives by plane in Hollywood this week. Senator Chandler will leave from Washington this week also.

Mimi Chandler's most recent picture, "And the Angles Sing," is to be shown in Washington before long. The stars are Dorothy Lamour and Fred MacMurray, but Miss Chandler, in a supporting role, is said to exhibit real dramatic ability.

Mrs. Chandler, too, has had a taste of the Kleig light. On a visit to her daughter when Miss Chandler first began her movie career, Mrs. Chandler was signed up for a mother part in "For Service Men Only," picked by Edgar Ulmer, writer, director and actor, because of her "typical Midwestern American charm."

Fords Will Be Two 'Noisy Citizens'

By Peggy Preston

After next January, that decidedly outspoken Democratic rebel, Representative Thomas Ford (Calif.) and his equally frank wife will spend the rest of their days as a couple of "noisy citizens."

Eyes a-twinkle, white-haired Mrs. Ford, who has won scores of friends and admirers during her 12 years here, gave this answer to the stock question on their future plans.

"We're not going to settle back to gentle reminiscing just because Tom is retiring from public office," opined this energetic lady who has published several novels, detective stories and an economic textbook. "We both will always be interested in good government, in honest forthright civic management . . . and as you know by now we generally speak right up about such matters."

Representative Ford is, of course, the mild-mannered gentleman of politics, who startled his colleagues on the Hill a while back when, after serving six terms, he suddenly announced his retirement, saying, among other things, "to be in the majority and have the minority run the House is too much for me."

His wife chuckled as she recalled the uproar his statements caused. "He really is not as purple-tempered as the press made him out to be," she said. "But he meant it when he said he was finished with political offices."

The Fords returned to California last month to carry the banner in the Democratic primary for their good friend, Helen Gahagan. The beauteous and talented Helen was Mr. Ford's choice for his successor in the House. Both he and Mrs. Ford are sure she'll make the grade in the November elections, and that she will be an able, effective member of the new Congress.

"Helen Gahagan is an intelligent as well as a beautiful woman," Mrs. Ford assured us. "She is a sound liberal and will work consistently and sincerely on the side of her most lowly constitutents."

As soon as Congress adjourns (she hopes it will be the end of this month) Mrs. Ford and her husband will leave for their home in Los Angeles. There for a few months they will rest and revel in the California clime.

If necessary, they'll return here after Labor Day for the opening of Congress. However, they both feel that their Washington days are over and done with.

"I'll miss it, you know," Mrs. Ford reflected. "Will miss my friends and the activities I've had here." And Washington will miss Mrs. Ford, who has always been "good copy." As president this year of the Congressional Club she has figured in many programs and campaigns. Interested in everything and everybody, she has added zest and sparkle to all her undertakings.

Proud Texan's Monologue Enlightens British Group As Fact and Fancy Mingle

TALL TEXAS TALK: When Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally entertain at a reception Saturday from 6 to 8 p. m., the gathering will be by and for Lone Star Staters only. . . . As is the case when all proud Texans get together, there'll probably be plenty of boasting about the home State.

"You can always tell a Texan—if he doesn't tell you first," is the saying often heard around Washington. . . . And that reminds me of a line of talk a tall Texan threw out at a dinner the other evening. Fact and fancy mingled in his monologue, delivered for the edification of a group of Britishers who hadn't been near the State. Said he:

"Texas is so big the people in Brownsville call Fort Worth people Yankees and citizens of El Paso sneer at citizens of Texarkana as being snobs of the effete East. . . . It is 150 miles farther from El Paso to Texarkana than it is from Chicago to New York. Fort Worth is nearer St. Paul, Minn., than it is to Brownsville, Tex. The United States with Texas left out would look like a three-legged Boston terrier. . . . Unless your front gate is at least 18 miles from your front door, you do not belong to society as constituted in Texas.

At this point, one listener made a feeble attempt to stop him. "But isn't it true that——"

The talking Texan fixed him with an icy stare . . . and continued his recital in machine-gun staccato: "Texas has enough land to supply every man, woman and child in the whole world with a tract 5 by 20 feet. The alfalfa grown in Texas if baled and built into a stairway would reach to the pearly gates. And if all the Texas steers were one steer, he could stand with his front feet in the Gulf of Mexico, one hind foot in the Hudson bay; with his horns punching holes in the moon . . . and with his tail brush off the mists from the Aurora Borealis!"

"And just one more thing—Texas, cut loose from the United States and folded over the map northward, would reach into Canada. Folded westward, it would extend into the Pacific; eastward, into the Atlantic, and folded southward, it would be halfway down in South America."

"But I say," cut in one incredulous, and exhausted, listener, "you don't often fold it—do you?"

FSTREET SCENE: The Wac is walking past a shop window, her eyes glued on the kind of clothes she won't be wearing until after the war. Also window-gazing is a handsome Air Corps lieutenant. The two nearly collide.

Politely each steps aside as salutes are exchanged . . . but they step in the same direction. Making embarassed noises, they both step again, and still confront each other. They salute once more . . . and then stand stock still as if sizing each other up. The man smiles. The girl starts to; thinks better of it, as her face takes on holiday colors. Presently, she moves off at right angles and strides off down the street. The man, who has also started to reverse his field, continues on, smiling . . . meets another Wac, and gives her a wide berth. But he's still smiling. . . .

ABOUT THE TOWN: You'd never guess that the woman playing the part of the sour-faced spinster in "Ten Little Indians" this week at the National Theater is a bride. But she is . . . and very lovely beneath the grease paint . . . and very superstitious about marriage. She is Estelle Winwood; her husband is Robert Henderson, theater director, and because both believe it would be bad luck to marry in May, they postponed their wedding until June . . . and walked down that popular aisle at New York's Church of the Covenant June 1 . . . at 12:15 a. m.

The foundation of a republic—the new Republic of Iceland—will be celebrated Saturday, June 17, when the Minister of Iceland and Mme. Thor Thors entertain at a reception. Since their legation is small and the party will be big, it will take place in the Presidential Room, Hotel Statler . . . and there is to be no admission without invitation-in-hand.

Leon Henderson, self-confessed "No. 1 heel of America" because he happens to broadcast for a widely known rubber heel manufacturer, ought to have a cigar company as his sponsor. Reason? He smokes the longest, blackest, strongest cigars in Washington, no matter where he happens to be. At a diplomatic reception he appeared the other day, cigar in mouth. "Hello, Leon," said a friend who happens to be a naval lieutenant. "I see you're smoking your favorite cigar. You haven't an extra, I suppose?" . . . "Why, of course," replied Leon, bringing out a stogie half a foot long, "I always carry a spare. Like a light?" . . . And so, the personable lieutenant, who is a grade-A Capitalite, was seen a few minutes later puffing throughout a party on one of the longest—and strongest—cigars ever smelled in Washington. "I couldn't let Leon down," he said afterward, by way of explanation.

FROM CAPITOL HILL: "I'm going down to see the President. He sent for me," proudly announced a Representative who is waging the fight of his political life in his home State.

An hour later he emerged from The Presence . . . with an air that had lost much of its erstwhile ebullience. "What did the President tell you?" he was asked.

"Oh, we just talked," answered the Representative. "I didn't have a chance to say much . . . "

Reminds me of the time, away back, when the President "sent for" Al Smith. There was a lot to talk about. Reporters, waiting outside for the affable and ambitious Al, stopped him; asked what went on.

"Oh, we just talked," said Al, in a crestfallen mood.

"But what did he say? What did he promise?" demanded the men of the press.

"What did he promise?" Al shot back. "Listen boys, that man never promises anything. And trying to pin him down is just like—why it's just like trying to nail a custard pie to a ceiling! It ain't possible!"

McVays Are On Honeymoon

Miss Louise N. Claytor, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Ash Claytor, became the bride of Capt. Charles B. McVay, 3d, USN, last Saturday.

The ceremony took place at the home of the bridegroom's parents at 5 p. m. in the presence of relatives and a few close friends. Chaplain Roland M. Faulk, USN, officiated. A small reception followed.

Given in marriage by her brother, Lieut. Comdr. Richard Claytor, the bride wore an afternoon gown of aqua crepe with purple accessories. She was unattended.

After a brief wedding trip, the couple will be at home at 2126 Connecticut ave.

Chaplain Reads Greaves-Henshaw Rites in Chapel

One of the 24 weddings held at West Point following graduation from the United States Military Academy Tuesday was that of Miss Elizabeth Jean Henshaw, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Fred M. Henshaw of Fort Monmouth, N. J., and Lieut. Fielding Lewis Greaves, an honor man and Cadet captain, son of Col. and Mrs. Gennad A. Greaves of Washington.

The ceremony took place in the cadet chapel with Cadet Chaplain John D. Walthour officiating. A reception at Cullum Hall followed.

Colonel Henshaw gave his daughter in marriage. Miss Nellie D. Greaves sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor and the best man was Lieut. George Pappas. Ushers were Cadet James L. Henshaw, brother of the bride, and Cadets Palmer McGee, Robert Woods and Dean McNaughton of Company B-1, the bridegroom's company. Lieutenant and Mrs. Greaves will live at Fort Sill, Okla.

'Pin-Up Girl' Almost Falls Down at Palace; Notes of the Theater

"PIN-UP GIRL," the new Twentieth Century-Fox starrer for Betty Grable, opening this morning on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, in its magnitude, gay trappings, Technicolor splendor, and even in the spacious dimensions of its cast, looks like a million dollars.

JOE E. BROWN

One hopes that this was the major aim of the producers, for the tenuous story that strings its swift succession of specialties together is straight off the 10-cent counter and its numerous tunes seemed to these dulling ears a block or two away from the line of march of the hit parade.

In extracting their script from a story by Libbie Block, Robert Ellis, Helen Logan and Earl Baldwin, the scenarists, seem to have been impelled by a worthy motive. What they obviously sought was a new twist to the "Stage Door Canteen" formula, substituting lively night spots for the canteen as an outlet for the serviceman's romantic ebullience, and adding a dash of "theater" to give the business added zest.

To achieve this end, they have made their principal feminine figure—and I mean "figure"—an imaginative young beauty from Missoula, Mo., who poses as a popular musical comedy star, whereas, as a matter of fact, what she is is an obscure typist in the Pentagon Building, or precincts contiguous thereto. The resultant confusion in the mind of her hero-wooer from Guadalcanal may be said to be the mainspring of what "plot" there is—and even that is never carried to any conclusive amatory climax.

Drill, Baby, Drill

Instead, after having left itself suspended in midair, the picture ends perfunctorily with a "March of the Amazons," in which—to preserve the semimilitary aspect of the whole thing, no doubt—the "Amazons," under the curvaceous command of Miss Grable, are tricked out in gaudy uniforms and rifles, to go through a marching-and-manual-of-arms routine that is only a split second shorter than a regulation session on an Army drill field.

More engaging than the "dramatic" purposes they pretend to serve, however, are the individual specialties and far-flung production numbers contributed by the highly personalized principals and a multitudinous and versatile ensemble.

Betty Grable's dual impersonation is as transparent as many of her diaphanous costumes, but she is in there pitching almost continuously in her blondely bumptious manner in such songs as "You're My Little Pin-Up Girl," "The Story of the Very Merry Widow," "Don't Carry Tales Out of School" and the like, whipped up for her use by Mack Gordon and James Monaco.

As her closest rival in love and audience appeal, is Martha Raye, thrashing around with some vehemence as a thwarted night club star, knocking the customers over with her robust songs and her boss with an equally lusty right hook. The Condos Brothers are in there, too, with recurrences of their magic tap dancing, and Charlie Spivak's Orchestra furnishes about the best instrumental background for the goings-on recently encountered on any screen.

Unused Talents

Joe E. Brown, as the night club owner, and Eugene Pallette, a globular Army noncom, are conspicuous in roles that don't even scratch the surface of their capabilities, and John Harvey, as Tommy Dooley, the medal man from the South Pacific, turns in an agreeable performance as the object of Miss Grable's bedazzlement. Dorothea Kent is cast as her Dumb-Dora understudy, and a host of others fill in the chinks effectively enough.

Not the least of the spectacular intervals turned over to Technicolor display is the flamboyant period dedicated to the "Skating Vanities," a very elegant demonstration of the art of roller-skating on a floor only a few square miles larger than the State of Texas.

Those viewing the slightly futile and strictly visual "Pin-Up Girl" this week will find themselves additionally diverted at the Palace by "Easy Life," a new release in the "Crime Does Not Pay" series; the War Activities Committee's "Movies at War"; the picturized "News of the Day," and a cartoon comedy, "The Green Line"—not forgetting, of course, the broadcast reports from the invasion front.

Dots and Dashes

The Theater Guild-American Theater Society, Sales Manager Bess Davis Schreiner speaking, announces that renewal applications are now being received at the mezzanine office in the National Theater for the subscription series of six plays for the 1944-45 season. Plays will be selected from among "Embezzled Heaven," by Franz Werfel and starring Ethel Barrymore; "The Cherry Orchard," with Eva LeGallienne and Joseph Schildkraut; a new play by Phillip Barry, "America Dances," a program of ballet plays; "Rebecca," dramatized by Daphne Du Maurier from her novel, with Bramwell Fletcher, Diana Barrymore and Florence Reed, and Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing," "Romeo and Juliet" or "As You Like It," depending upon casting possibilities. Other proven productions also will be presented during the new Washington subscription season. . . . A special section of reserved seats has been set aside for wounded veterans of World War II for "Stars Under the Stars," tomorrow night's opening bill at the Watergate, starring Art Hodes and his orchestra, Pearl Primus and Richard Dyer-Bennet . . . Arrangements were perfected by the Washington Cooperative Bookshop and the Red Cross Unit at Walter Reed Hospital . . . "Mayerling," costarring Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux, is being held over a second week at the Little Theater; ditto, "Show Business," starring Eddie Cantor, Joan Davis, George Murphy and Constance Moore, at RKO-Keith's . . . Yes, yes, yes, "No, No, Nanette," now, at Roosevelt Auditorium . . . "Peter Pan, the Magic Man," who played to a packed house of juveniles at the National last winter, is returning to the Children's Museum on Saturday, to help celebrate its third anniversary . . . Wait'll you hear—some time soon—about Casey Robinson and Tamara Toumanova, all bound up in "Days of Glory," coming soon to the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater . . . A very amiable gentleman . . . And what a gal! . . . The Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera have invitations out for screenings of "El Gendarme Desconocido," starring Cantinflas, and "Maria Candelaria," starring Dolores Del Rio, in the Department of Interior Auditorium, on Friday evenings, June 9 and 23, respectively.

Broadway Notes and Anecdotes

New York, June 7.—Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, decided to do her own tax work this year. She labored over the complicated return, made the calculations and entries, and sent it off, with a check in full, to the Collector of Internal Revenue. Then Mrs. Reed showed her return to her husband . . . "This tax is unusually high" said the Justice. . . "Yes, it is," sighed Mrs. Reed "Not that I mind paying income taxes, but I think taxes are too high" . . . Justice Reed studied her return, and Mrs. Reed now has applied for a refund. For Mrs. Reed had sent to the Collector of Internal Revenue the amount of her entire net income.

Well, the Chief Justice's beard is in good shape, which means it has good soil."

During the invasion of Hollandia, Admiral Barbey received a report from the commandant of the troops which had invaded on the left flank. The troops in the center, read the second report, also were progressing easily. But the Admiral had no report from his right flank. He dispatched a patrol to learn what had happened there. Back came the report: "Right flank landed with few casualties." The Admiral asked: "How many casualties?" The report came: "Three casualties. One fell in while disembarking, a second tripped and hurt his ankle, and the third accidentally shot himself in the foot."

Maisie's Romances Tax Writers' Wits

Hollywood — Explaining away leading men from previous pictures has become quite an ingenious game for writers of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Maisie screen stories, starring Ann Sothern. The latest, "Maisie Goes to Reno," however, will have the topper of them all.

Those who saw "Swing-shift Maisie" may recall that Miss Sothern's romance with Pilot James Craig had reached the sizzling stage when the picture ended. Explaining Craig's absence in the current adventure of the Brooklyn blonde required a bit of doing—and Miss Sothern does it.

Queried by her current leading man in "Maisie Goes to Reno," as to her romantic attachments, Maisie retorts:

"There was a guy—a pilot—but he got interested in studying the native dances—in Dallas, Tex."

Fontaine Blooms

Some of the glamour queens will be green-eyed when they see Joan Fontaine in "Frenchman's Creek." Technicolor is very kind to her, and in a red wig and gorgeous period costumes she turns into a raving beauty.

Gala Welcome for Homecoming Star

Hollywood—"Myrna Loy Comes Home" might have appeared on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production schedule instead of "The Thin Man Goes Home."

The occasion was indeed a gala one when the lovely Loy returned to the studio for the first time since 1941. Executives, producers, prop men, electricians—all the friends she had made over the years were on hand to extend greetings.

Soon after, Myrna appeared before the cameras for wardrobe and makeup tests for the new Thin Man film in which she will again be costarrde with William Powell.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WHITE HOUSE insiders say that the President gave a great deal of thought to the timing of his permanent world peace plans.

Here are the factors which caused him to launch his plan at this particular moment:

1. The Republican National Convention will now have to indorse the general thesis of world cooperation or else face the charge of heading the country toward another war. If F. D. R. had waited much longer, he might have been accused of springing the plan too late for the Republicans to consider things properly prior to the meeting in Chicago, June 26.

2. F. D. R. saw his old chief, Woodrow Wilson, wait until Europe no longer needed U. S. support to win the war, no longer needed food and relief. In contrast, the United States is at the peak of its war contribution, also at the peak of its bargaining power for peace-for-future machinery. The President decided to use that bargaining power when it had the greatest leverage.

3. Churchill's recent speech proposing world rule by the Big Powers, also helped precipitate announcement of the plan. The President some time ago accepted the Sumner Welles thesis that the little nations must play an important part in the postwar setup and it was considered a good idea to remind Churchill of this.

4. U. S. prestige with European nations—Sweden, France, Yugoslavia, Spain, Ireland—is at a low ebb. So it was considered a good time to remind them that the USA is still a friend.

NOTE—One difference between Cordell Hull and Sumner Welles which led to their breakup was postwar peace planning. Welles long had argued that the time to develop the peace machinery of the world was now—before the war was over.

Mr. Hull, up until he went to Russia last fall, had informed Senators that future peace machinery should be put off until after the war and left entirely to the State Department to decide.

Germany's Smart Choices

U. S. EXPERTS who have studied the Nazi military set-up to resist invasion figure that Hitler—or whoever did the picking for him—was smart in his selection of German military leaders. Three of the best men in the German army have been given the job of combating what the Nazis know is the death thrust at Germany.

No. 1 is Field Marshal Earl von Rundstedt, considered the best strategist and over all commander in Germany. Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, immediately under him, is the best man for lightning moves and panzer tactics.

Finally, Col. Gen. Heinz Guderian is considered the best tank commander in the German Army.

U. S. experts, who believe in looking facts in the face, classify these three as among the top military brains of Europe. However, what size and caliber of troops they have been able to spare from the Russian front may be more important than generals.

Capitol Chaff

CRACK AIR ACE Major de Seversky has been doing something besides design new planes lately. He has been dancing jigs before one-legged U. S. soldiers in hospitals to show them what a one-legged man can do if he has to. Seversky had his right leg shot off in World War I, but he says it was a godsend because he was able to smuggle $50,000 out of Russia in his wooden leg. His visits have given a lot of cheer and hope to one-legged veterans. . . Congratulations to Lieut. Harry B. Paul Barnhart gor bringing laughs to the boys i nthe South Pacific with his Army show "Stars and Gripes." . . . Governor Willis of Kentucky is getting the reputation among Kentuckians of veering toward petticoat influence in the Palace. Mrs. Willis seems to have quite a bit of influence.

The actress, who just completed a role in "Gold Town," received a note from the men (Privates First Class Charles Weis, Howard Dobbs, Edward Nelson, Corpl. Clayton Floyd and Staff Sergt. Leon Warner) requesting the picture because their pin-up photo of Frances had an enemy bullet hole in it.

The missle barely missed the five, hitting the picture, which the boys forwarded to Frances.

Plenty of Pulchritude

Three beauty contest winners play parts in "Take It Big," the Pine-Thomas musical starring Jack Haley, Harriet Hilliard and Mary Beth Hughes. Marga Dean is a former "Miss California," Jane Welborn was "Miss Hollywood" of 1943 and Nancy Brinckman won the beauty crown of the Los Angeles Junior Chamber of Commerce competition.

HEDDA HOPPER

'Home' Moves Around!

Hollywood, Calif., June 7.—No, Twentieth Century-Fox's "Home in Indiana" is not the new title for "One World." "Home in Indiana" was made in five States. It's got some of the most beautiful scenery in color ever seen on the screen. You'll fall in love all over again with Lon McAllister. Jeanne Crain lives up to all the studio's expectations. If the studio executives had seen the picture before they cast "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," I'll bet Jeanne would be doing the Dorothy McGuire role. They had to borrow Dorothy. Walter Brennan is always excellent. Picture's given Charlotte Greenwood a whole new career. From now she'll be offered the Marie Dressler roles . . . Other studios are screaming "unfair" at Metro because it is signing up so many top musicians. The latest one is Yehudi Menuhin. Metro already has Jose Iturbi, Lauritz Melchoir, and James Melton. Seems the Met and Carnegie hall are being moved West.

DOROTHY McGUIRE

Forgot Herself

A radio writer interviewed Paulette Goddard night before she married Burgess Meredith. She said, "I like your idea. What's your name?" He replied, "Charlie Chaplin." She said, "You're a liar." That ended the interview. It wasn't her Charlie Chaplin . . . Cookie Fairchild stands in well with the distaff side. In the past years she's made musical arrangements for Dinah Shore, Deanna Durbin, Ginny Simms and Nora Martin . . . Letters are pouring in to Twentieth Century requesting the appearance of Carmen Miranda in China and India. I hope she goes . . . Bob Crosby, playing in "Meet Miss Bobby Socks," got his 5-year-old Cathy plugging for him. In fact she gave him the title for a song, "I'll Swoon for You, Daddy, Dear." It's for Father's Day . . . Abbott and Costello will again help Eddie Sherman celebrate his anniversary (20th) as an exclusive booker for the Atlantic City Steel Pier by playing a week there in August. Costello isn't strong enough to tackle a tour, but he's able to do just that one job for his old friend.

Only the Beginning

Joan Loring's work on "Hollywood Showcase" won't be forgotten. Joan played opposite Ronnie Colman on the air in "Snow Goose." . . . David O. Selznick revealed quite a radio personality on "Showcase." He should do more of it. . . . Band Leader Richard Himber and Orson Wells are in daily huddles concerning Himber's magic show, "Abracadabra," which opens on Broadway in September. Orson is assisting, free. He loves magic . . . Susanna Foster lives on a hilltop and when she heard footsteps outside her bedroom window she jumped up, turned on all the lights and turned on the phonograph. Not until the fifth record had finished did she realize she was playing her own songs . . . Jerry Lester's advice to the lovelorn: "A man's greatest mistake is supposing that a grass widow is green." . . . Little Jane Nigh, Long Beach high school girl, has been put under contract by Twentieth Century. She'll be in "Winged Victory." George Cukor, director, told Darryl Zanuck little Jane has the making of a star.

A Fan Speaks Out

Here's Harold Herring wishing Warners would give "Autumn Crocus" to Francis Lederer and Janet Gaynor. He has nothing against Bette Davis, but he'd like Ethel Barrymore to repeat her own performance in "The Corn Is Green" on the screen. He also hopes I'll be around when they cast "The Prodigal Woman" to play Minnie Jekyll. I must read that again. Could he mean "Jekyll and Hyde?" . . . Harry Sherman is talking a directing deal with Victor Jory, who put "Two Mrs. Carrols" on Broadway . . . The movies are 50 years old! They were born through Thomas Edison and came to fruition through D. W. Griffith, and yet we're so ungrateful to Griffith. We use him only when we want a special kind of advertising. However, he's in a lucky position. Took care of his money when he was making it. He's not dependent on our town . . . War Correspondent John Gardner retold criticism from overseas about some of our entertainers abroad. I've had letters from the boys telling same thing. There's another batch in from the South Seas. One tells of a recent visitor who paid $100 for the last bottle of Scotch, which he took with him. Every boy left behind knows about it.

Wouldn't We All?

A friend of mine came west on same train with 11 pilots, gunners, and bombardiers who have had 25 bombing missions over Europe. Some of them had been away 25 months. A pilot major was in charge. Another pilot, a captain, was due to get off the train at Sacramento. He hadn't seen his wife or baby for 25 months. You've never seen such a nervous guy. Everybody on the train got excited. He was on the platform 45 minutes before the train stopped. Everybody got off to watch. When he saw his wife at the other end of the platform he dropped his bag; they flew at each other. First he hugged his wife, then the baby, then both together. Then they all started to cry. Most of the folks on the train did likewise. Wouldn't we all?

Simon J. Talty Dead at 61; Funeral Services Saturday

Simon J. Talty, 61, mechanic with the Cadillac company since its founding here 35 years ago, died yesterday at his home, 2902 Porter st. nw., after an illness of four months.

A native of County Clare, Ireland, Mr. Talty came to Washington at the age of 15. His father, the late John Talty, had journeyed to this country to fight with the North in the Civil War. He then returned to Ireland.

Mr. Talty operated his own repair shop here from 1922 to 1929. He was a member of Keane Council, Knights of Columbus.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Talty; a brother, Peter J. Talty, Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Stout of Rosemont, Va.

High mass will be offered at 9 a. m. Saturday in St. Anne's Catholic Church, 4400 Wisconsin ave. nw. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Charles Long

Charles Long, 68, chief copy cutter at the Evening Star and for 44 years a member of its composing room staff, died yesterday at his home, 1610 Juniper st. nw., after a brief illness.

A native of Philadelphia, Mr. Long came to Washington as a child and was educated in the public schools here. He was a member of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, and past master of Hope Lodge, No. 20, FAAM; a member of Columbia Chapter, No. 1, RAM; Columbia Commandery, No. 2, Knights Templar, and Almas Temple, Mystic Shrine.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Grace Mehrling Long; a brother, Alexander Long, and three sisters, Mrs. George E. Corbett, Mrs. Timothy S. Newkirk and Mrs. Seaton W. Trunnell, all of Washington.

Services will be held at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw., at 3 p. m. tomorrow (Friday). Masonic services and burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Emma Reifsnyder

Mrs. Emma Reifsnyder, wife of the late Frederick R. Reifsnyder, accountant, formerly of Washington, was buried in Pittsburg, where she died Monday.

Born near Providence Forge, Va., 75 years ago, she came to Washington as a child, and was graduated from Washington High School.

Surviving are her sister, Mrs. De Witt C. Croissant, of 1717 Q st. nw.; a brother, Lynn H. Troutman, of 125 12 st. ne.; and her step-daughter, Mrs. H. C. Stier of Pittsburgh, formerly of Georgetown.

Richard A. Hardisty

Master T/Sergt. Richard A. Hardisty, USMC, 36, who died here on Tuesday, will be buried with military honors today in Arlington National Cemetery. Services will be held at 9 a. m. in the Fort Myer Chapel.

A native of Cincinnati, Ohio, Sergt. Hardeisty joined the Marine Corps in 1926, serving at Culebra, Puerto Rico, with the Fleet Marine Force.

After the outbreak of war, he saw service at Midway and was cited by the Commander of the Pacific Fleet for intrepidity in maintaining communications during the initial Jap attack.

Surviving are his wife and four children, who have made their home at the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va.

James Lynch

Funeral services for James Lynch, 69, former employe of the Washington Terminal Co., and a Spanish-American War veteran, who died Tuesday at his home, will be held at the residence, 227 H st. ne., at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow, followed by high requiem mass at St. Aloysius Church at 9 a. m. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Born in Ireland, Mr. Lynch came to America when he was 8. He was employed as a crane operator and fireman at the Navy Yard before 1921. In 1923 he went to the Washington Terminal Co. as machinist's helper and remained there until five years ago. He was a member of the United Spanish War Veterans.

Mr. Lynch is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret V. Lynch, two daughters, Sister Ann Ignatius, S.N.D., and Sister Julia of the Sacred Heart, S.N.D., and a son, James M. Lynch.

Mrs. Eva Jeffers Daughton

Funeral services for Mrs. Eva Jeffers Daughton, 69, who died Monday at her home, 6808 N. 25th st., Falls Church, Va., were held yesterday at the Birch funeral home. Burial was in Arlington Cemetery.

A native of Baltimore, Mrs. Daughton came to Washington at the age of 7. Sh ewas a graduate of Western High School. She was married to Capt. John B. Daughton, USA, in December, 1900, and moved to Falls Church, where she resided until her death.

Mrs. Daughton is survived by a son, Maj. Alva D. Daughton of the Army Medical Corps, now stationed in England, and a sister, Mrs. Nena Mullen of Falls Church.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWERS

Death Starts Bootleg Liquor Probe Here

A police investigation of the sale of poisonous bootleg whisky in the District got under way yesterday following the death of a Negro Sunday after he drank a combination of aviation gasoline, cleaning fluid and a lead compound.

The man, Otis Baley, about 45, no fixed address, was found unconscious in an alley in the 2200 block of 8th st. nw. An autopsy showed he had been drinking the combination which is known as "smoke."

A coroner's jury yesterday ordered the two persons who had allegedly given the liquid to Baley to be held for the action of the grand jury. They were Willie Wilson, Negro, 30, of 2210 8th st. nw. and Anna May Gay, Negro, 21, of 2229 8th st. nw.

Police said Wilson had purchased the liquid at a local paint store where it was sold as a paint remover. The liquid is diluted with water and sold as "smoke" at 5 cents a drink in "alley bars," according to police.

Boy, Girl Face 11 Charges of Housebreaking

A 12-year-old boy and his younger sister, 11, were placed in the hands of juvenile authorities yesterday following their arrests Tuesday night on a charge of 11 cases of housebreaking and one case of destroying private property.

The two, who had played hookey from school since last Thursday, were said to have operated in the Northeast section of the city, where they broke into private homes and took money, allegedly to finance daily trips to Glen Echo.

Both of the children were arrested in their home in the 400 block of H st. ne., after they had entered the home of Police Officer Paul Withers at 2158 30th st. ne.

Withers reported that his home had been entered some time Tuesday, and the investigating officers soon learned that two school children had been seen around the neighborhood during school hours. The arrest was made after a check at the school disclosed the pair had been absent since last Thursday. Two boys, aged 12 and 14 years, were also turned over to juvenile authorities yesterday following their arrest Tuesday night on a charge of housebreaking.

Columbia Artists Give Neat Comedy

By Ray C. B. Brown

District of Columbia Recreation Department presents the Columbia Light Opera Company in "No, No, Nanette" on Wednesday night in Roosevelt High Schoo auditorium. The cast:

Nanette ..... Jeannete Bittner
Lucille Early ..... Connie Krueger
Sue Smith ..... Amelia Shordav
Betty (from Boston) ..... Mary Hastings
Winnie (from Washington) ..... Mimi di Maggio
Flora (from 'Frisco) ..... Mary Vagnoni
Pauline ..... Fan Goldschein
Jimmy Smith ..... Florenz Hinz
Billy Early ..... Kerper Propert
Tom Trainor ..... Vladimir DuBois
Director: Ethyl Manning

With the Columbia Light Opera Company it has been operettas all the way through its eight seasons until last evening, when it ventured into musical comedy with creditable results that won the approval of a large audience. The performance did not have the professional snap of a Broadway production, but one does not expertise from an amateur organization whose discipline is voluntary and not enforced. At times the action was a little awkard and loose, but it was a first night and the pace will probably be stepped up during the performances the rest of this week. It is a good show by local talent, and well worth attending.

Florenz Hinz, whose gift for comedy is an instinct, was the life of the party and the animating spirit of the intrigues, as he impersonated the wealthy business man who innocently involves himself in a web of femininity because he wants to be happy but cannot be happy unless he makes them happy too. He is a natural in drollery, and his acting has the insouciance that enables him to seem surprised at his own humor. Something of the same quality emerged in the work of Fan Goldschein as Pauline, the cook, with her recurrent ultimatum: "I'm leaving."

Jeannette Bittner in the title role again justified her status as one of the most popular members of the company. Her voice has an engaging freshness, and there is piquancy in her personality. The supporting cast included Amelia Shorday, Connie Krueger, Mary Hastings, Mimi di Maggio, Mary Vagnoni, Kerper Propert, and Vladimir DuBois. The chorus was, as usual, well trained and zestful.

She's their Pin-up Girl
The boys in camp know how hard she tries to get their calls through
They are grateful for everything the telephone operators are doing to get them a Long Distance line to home.
They will thank you, too, if you leave the Long Distance wires from seven to ten for the service men.
That is the best time many of them have to call.

912 Naval Academy Graduates Take Oath, Set Out for Posts

By Fred W. Stabley

Annapolis, Md., June 7 (AP).—Nine hundred and twelve Naval Academy graduates were headed for their first posts in the armed services of their Nation at war today after taking the oath of office from Admiral Ernest Joseph King, commander of the fleet and chief of naval operations.

They, and the thousands of guests who jammed spacious Dahlgren Hall for the 104th graduation ceremony in the Academy's history, heard Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal credit the control established by the American and British navies over the Atlantic sealanes with preparing the way for the invasion of Europe.

This "tremendous massed power which is now launched by sea, by air and by land against Hitler's armies is a vivid and convincing demonstration of . . .. 'the silent power' of the Navy," Forrestal asserted in his address broadcast over Station WINX of Washington.

10 Out of 7400 Sunk

Control of the sea "was accomplished through constant and unremitting study of enemy tactics anr through the most extraordinary coordination of surface vessel, land-based air and the baby flattops," he added.

"Since January 1, 1942," he said, "a total of 7400 vessels have been convoyed across the Atlantic by the American Navy, with a loss of 10. And in this list of casualties is not a single troop transport."

America, unlike Germany, "did not count on any single weapon, such as the submarine," to win the war at sea, but built a "balanced fleet" on the concept "that no one weapon or class or kind of vessel alone can win a war."

The Secretary of the Navy, making his first important public speech since succeeding the late Frank Knox to the Cabinet post, emphasized the importance of maintaining without a letdown "concentrated pressure" on an opponent even when victory seems sure.

Warns Against Letdown

Such a letdown in sports, he added "has proved fatal to many an apparent winner and it can be equally fatal in war."

Forrestal presented diplomas to the graduates—the largest class to graduate from the Academy in history—by companies while numerous uniformed dignitaries looked on.

The oath of office was administered in deep silence, broken only by the sober tones of Admiral King's voice and the low grind of the movie cameras and in a few moments the air was filled with ringing cheers from the regiment "for those about to leave us" and the graduating class "for those we leave behind us."

Scurrying spectators had their traditional free-for-all for the white caps the graduates tossed into the air with the final cheer and another Navy graduation was over.

Included in the list of guests on the speakers stand in addition to Admiral King and Forrestal were Artemus L. Gates, assistant secretary of the Navy for air; Vice Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, deputy chief of Naval operations; Vice Admiral Randall Jacobs, chief of Naval personnel; Admiral A. J. Hepburn, chairman of the general board and Lt. Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, Marine Corps commandant.

After the invocation was given by Academy Chaplain William N. Thomas, Academy Superintendent Rear Admiral John R. Beardall bade farewell to the graduates and introduced Forrestal.

Seated behind Admiral Beardall were three former Academy superintendents including Rear Admiral A. H. Scales, Admiral D. F. Sellers and Vice Admiral Russell Willson.

Nuptials Ahead

Formal events attendant upon June week are now at an end but informal calendar for the rest of the week is full, highlighted by numerous weddings and parties for the newly commissioned ensigns and their sweethearts.

The first of the estimated 10,000 visitors which swelled the population of the Maryland State Capital to nearly double its normal size for the commencement week, left shortly after graduation. The remainder will return to their homes throughout the Nation within the next two or three days.

Tomorrow will be just another day for the remaining midshipmen who will return to their classrooms to continue their Academy studies.

Here Is a Chance to Buy a Brand New Brick Home Inside Washington

Newly built; never lived-in—we had enough good prewar materials in our warehouses to build a few homes to the old standard of excellence. These charming homes have a spacious Living Room, an entirely separate Dining Room and a MODERN KITCHEN on the 1st floor. 2nd floor has 2 good-size bedrooms and tile bath and shower in color. The basement is full size and each home has a lovely garden. You will find such top quality prewar features as steel casement windows, hardwood floors and many others. The community is restricted, and already has more than 500 occupied homes. Complete shopping center in the development. Choice of trolley or bus; take any streetcar to 17th and Pa. Ave. S.E., transfer to the Benning Bus and get off at River Terrace. Or take any streetcar marked Kenilworth, Seat Pleasant or District Line and ride direct to River Terrace. By auto: Drive to 15th and H Sts. N.E., then out Benning Road to River Terrace. Only 25 minutes by bus or trolley from downtown.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Prince Needs a Shave — By Milton Caniff

THIS DOESN'T MAKE SENSE!.. BURMA, THE SMOOTHIE ... ENDING UP AS BUG BAIT IN THIS SNAKE FARM...
I SHOULD HAVE GIVEN MYSELF UP TO THE BRITISH ON THAT OLD PIRACY CHARGE! ... THEY DON'T HAVE LEECHES IN JOHNNY BULL'S CLINKS...
I'M SO SLEEPY I CAN'T STAND UP— BUT I'M AFRAID TO LIE DOWN... AT THAT, IT MIGHT BE NICE TO DREAM I WAS IN SOME LUXURIOUS PALACE BEING KISSED BY A SHAPPY PRINCE!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

SO--YOU KNOW THIS DR. KINGERY HALL, DO YOU?
YES--HE AND KAREN ARE FRIENDS, BUFF!--BUT WHAT WOULD THEY BE DOING AT THAT ROADHOUSE--AT 2 IN THE MORNING?
DISCUSSING THEIR OPERATIONS, NO DOUBT! LISTEN, BOY BLUE! --THE DAY I LANDED HERE I WALKED IN ON THAT PAIR IN HER OFFICE! PLAYIN' PATTY-CAKE--FOR KEEPS!
DON'T COME UNGLUED OVER THIS, BARRY! LOVE IS A GAMBLE--AND THE FAVORITE ISN'T THE ONLY HORSE IN THE RACE--!
OH! I'M SO SORRY!... I THOUGHT MR. WARD WAS ALONE....!

IT'S TOO BAD PHIL HAD TO MAKE THE TRIP ALONE, MRS FINN--THAT MR MINTMORE COULDN'T GO WITH HIM
YES, FLOSSIE! IT'LL BE A LONG LONESOME RIDE!
WHAT LINE ARE YOU IN, MR FINN?
WELL, I S'POSE YOU'VE HEARD OF MORTIMER MINTMORE?
THE MULTI-MILLIONAIRE? I SHOULD SAY SO!
WELL, I'M--AH--ASSOCIATED WITH HIM--IN FACT, I'M GOING DOWN TO HIS ESTATE NOW--TO TALK OVER A FEW DEALS!
IS IT TRUE THAT MINTMORE IS BUYING INTO AMALGAMATED ZINC?
WELL, IT MIGHT BE ZINC--AND THEN AGAIN, IT MIGHT BE COPPER!

MR. AND MRS. — For the Duration — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

YOU SAY ALL YOUR OFFICE BOYS ARE GIRLS THESE DAYS, JOE
YEAH, MOST OF THE BOYS ARE IN SERVICE
SUCH A NOVELTY. I'D LIKE TO SEE THEM HERE COMES ONE OF 'EM NOW
TAKE THESE LETTERS, WILL YOU PLEASE, HORTENSE
YES, MISTER GREEN
WHY, SHE'S JUST A KID! YOU CERTAINLY DON'T TAKE HER OUT TO LUNCH!
NOPE! HER HUSBAND COMES IN ONCE IN A WHILE, WHEN HE'S ON FURLOUGH

OH--COME IN, DOCTOR SMITH
THANK YOU FOR INVITING ME, MISS DUGAN--
I KNOW WHY YER HERE--YA STILL THINK SUMP'M IS WRONG WITH ME--
I'M NOT THE SLIGHTEST BIT INTERESTED IN YOU AT THE MOMENT, MR. DUGAN--
SOMETHING'S WRONG WITH ME--IT'S MY STOMACH--
YEAH?? --WHAT'S WRONG WITH IT??
IT HASN'T HAD A HOME COOKED MEAL IN YEARS --(SNIFF) -- (UMMMM)--

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Faith — By Frank Martinek

WHEN YOU'VE RECOVERED REPORT TO WASHINGTON... HAVE IMPORTANT ASSIGNMENT....
AYE, AYE, SIR!
AS NIGHT FALLS, WINSLOW'S PHYSICAL BEING RESTS, BUT HIS MIND IS RESTLESS AND CONFUSED.
PLEASE, GOD... SAVE RED FROM DANGER AND PAIN... WE NEED HIM...
AS DAY BREAKS, THE RISING SUN RADIATES THE ROOM WITH ITS SEVERY FACETS. SNOOP TIP-TOES IN!
TOP RANCH BOSS UPSTAIRS... I KNOW YOU'RE THERE... TAKE GOOD CARE OF MISTER WINSLOW!

NOW--TO FIND MIGUEL THE DIVER AND--RESCUE HIM!
WELL, WELL! KNOCKED OUT BY THE SUDDEN DESCENT! --PERHAPS A DASH OF COLD WATER WOULD REVIVE YOU---
